HITLER DRIVES AT JEWS

Slight Gain Shown by Pershing

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 25 (AP)—General John J. Pershing, whose condition became critical last night, physicians predicted the end was near, continued to rally today and an official bulletin said his heart and blood pressure were improved.

"General Pershing's rally continues," said the 9:15 a. m. (11:15 a. m. EST) bulletin issued by Dr. Roland Davison. "He is now better than he has been since early yesterday afternoon."

The bulletin, however, contained the statement that "his condition must still be regarded as critical."

"No prediction can be made at this time," Dr. Davison stated.

The World War chief, who lapsed into unconsciousness at 9 o'clock last night causing his physicians to surmise he could not last long, rallied under the administration of heart stimulants.

TEMPERATURE NORMAL

His temperature was normal and he rested well during the early morning hours. His blood pressure was slightly better. He rallied enough at one time to show signs of recognizing those at his bedside.

Sergeant C. C. Shaeffer, the general's orderly, related that when one of the nurses removed a hypodermic needle from the patient's arm he turned to Shaeffer and said:

"She is just as mean as ever, isn't she?"

Shaeffer was smiling again and there was a general air of relaxation among attendants and relatives.

The staff of physicians despaired of his life early last evening. Dr. Verne Mason, who was called from Los Angeles to consult with Dr. Davison and Lieutenant-Colonel S. U. Marrietta of San Antonio, Tex., made plans reservations to return home.

Miss May, Pershing, his only sister and devoted companion of recent years, spent much of the night sitting by the bed holding the General's hand.

SON AT BEDSIDE

Warren Pershing, an only son, paced the corridors and occasionally stepped into the room for a glimpse at his father.

Indisposed since February 5 and confined to his bed for 10 days, the commander of America's expeditionary forces in the World War held his own until Monday, when he suffered a sudden relapse.

'Lion-Cage' Parade Of Tipsy Assailed

Mayor William E. Kane's novel plant to put drunks in a "lion's, tiger's or some other wild animal's cage" and parade them through the streets is just the beginning of a campaign to make Woburn a "spotless city."

While Woburn citizens debated today the question of whether to take a drink (of liquor) or not to take a drink (of liquor), the fiery city official made it clear today what he was going to do.

And he meant it. In no uncertain terms, he declared:

"I'm not joking."

But the mayor's proposed cure for drunkenness, in Woburn anyway, gave people plenty to talk about—and they did.

State Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman characterized the proposal as "positively vicious and rotten."

LYMAN RAPS PLAN

"The idea is absolutely wrong," Lyman continued. "The stocks of Colonial times were bad enough but this plan is infinitely worse."

Lyman declared he was satisfied that the plan "would not reduce the number of drunks."

But if Mayor Kane was taken back by an adverse comment on the wide publicity given his plan, he showed no signs of it today.

In fact, he went ahead and told newspapermen just what he intended to do to "follow up" his original announcement.

"We're going to call it an illuminated homegow," he said. "I'm going to have it brightly lighted so that everyone can see the drunks as the police tour the city.

"If necessary we'll have five or six cages and put them on as trailers to police cars.

"This will prevent police officers from driving the cars out of the city. The cars won't look so good with cages attached to them.

SAME FATE FOR WOMEN

"Women who are drunk will be thrown in just the same as the men. Women now have equal rights with men.

Mayor Kane had previously announced that he had negotiated for

James Roosevelt On Marine Duty

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP)—Lieutenant-Colonel James Roosevelt, the President's son and secretary, left in a Marine plane today en route to Cuba to start his first active military training as a Marine Corps reserve officer.

For two weeks the six-foot, 30-year-old "Jimmy" will undergo the same training ashore and aboard a warship as is required of hundreds of other reserve officers.

Three battleships comprising the navy's training squadron, and a half-dozen destroyers are now in the Caribbean.

Young Roosevelt's commission dates from 1936.

Gibson, Famed Builder, Dies

LEICESTER, Feb. 25—Bradford A. Gibson, president of the Leicester Savings Bank and for many years one of the most prominent building contractors in the nation, died today at his home at the age of 68.

Many buildings throughout the country stand as monuments to his work, among them the homes of the late Dwight W. Morrow at Englewood, N. J., and Vincent Astor at Port Washington, L. I.

He was a graduate of Worcester Polytechnic Institute, class of 1891, and for many years was president and treasurer of the Central Building Corporation of Worcester.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Edith Perry Gibson; one son, Herrick L. Gibson of Grand Rapids, Mich., and a daughter, Mrs. Lucille Gifford of New York.

China Scout Plane Over Tokyo

SHANGHAI Feb. 25 (AP)—A great air battle was fought today over Nanchang, Chinese air base in Kiangsi province. Tonight both Japanese and Chinese reported victory.

The Japanese naval command here declared "more than 30" Chinese warplanes "of Russian and American manufacture" were shot down by a Japanese armada of 50 planes.

The Chinese declared they shot down, each or 30 Japanese planes making the raid. They mentioned no loss of Chinese aircraft.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 25—Fifty American aviators prepared today for swoops that will dwarf Wednesday's attack on Formosa—and will likely bring the first aerial assaults on the islands of Japan proper.

The raid on Formosa was "only the curtain-raiser" for what is to follow, according to A. P. Patterson, American airplane agent, who left tonight for Hankow.

Passengers in the plane with Spreckles were Lois Clarke de Ruyter Spreckles Clinton, his 26-year-old former wife; Mrs. Alex Young, 30, of San Francisco, and Rex Leslie, 35, San Francisco.

PLANE WINGS OVER

Dr. Louis Lombardi of St. Mary's Hospital in Reno said Mrs. Clinton was the most seriously hurt. She suffered a serious head injury and possible internal injuries. The others suffered from cuts and bruises.

About 100 feet in the air the plane winged over and fell. It hit the ground with its motors racing and the fuselage buckled in the middle.

Skids Under Schuschnigg

By ALFRED TYRNAUER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

VIENNA, Feb. 25—The hand of the Nazi party descended on Austria today following the fighting speech by Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg before the Austrian Parliament last night, declaring a "fight until death" for the nation's independence.

Power of the Nazi steamroller on this side of the Austro-German border quickly became evident when the new pro-Hitler Austrian minister of interior ordered all Nazis arrested and jailed in last night's disorders released immediately.

This was done immediately, and for the moment the entire nation remained quiet.

SCHUSCHNIGG ON WAY OUT

This bore out earlier reports from Berlin that Schuschnigg, astride the two horses of "Nazi economic union" and "independent Austria," today was headed for the discard.

Schuschnigg's swan song was sung, the reports said, when the Chancellor in discussing the Berchtesgaden "truce" failed to mention Hitler by name, although he gave warm praise to Mussolini.

The chancellor's speech, made from the rostrum of the federal diet (parliament) and radioed to the nation, had not even finished when Austrian Nazis began demonstrations.

Austria's patriots marched the streets in joyous celebration well into the morning hours today to hail their chancellor's pledge that the nation would remain independent and free of Nazidom.

Catholics and Jew and the Vienna press were likewise enthusiastic over the declaration that there

Bill Aims to Ban War-Time Profits

House Group Would Give President Power for Universal Draft

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP)—The House military committee approved today a bill to give the President broad authority to prevent profiteering in war time.

The committee's action broke a long deadlock over the legislation, which President Roosevelt recommended in his national defense measure to Congress.

The measure contains a provision for a universal draft of man power and industry in wartime.

The Chief Executive would have power to put a "ceiling" on prices. In addition the legislation provides for a "system of taxation which shall absorb all profits above a fair normal return to be fixed by Congress."

PROVIDES FOR DRAFT

The Treasury secretary would be required by the war profits bill to transmit to Congress on the opening day of its next session a recommendation for a tax plan provided by the measure.

The bill provides that whenever Congress declares war the President is authorized to proclaim it to be unlawful to buy, sell, lease or otherwise contract for any article, service or right, or interest in property" which he might enumerate, at a "fair and just" price, commission, compensation or reward" than was in effect on a date he would name.

When, in time of war, the President considered an immediate increase of the military establishment necessary, he would be authorized to draft men between the ages of 21 and 31, subject to age exemptions or other conditions he might prescribe.

CALL FOR STIFF FINE

The legislation would empower the President to provide government control over material resources, industrial organizations, public services, and generally, over commodity exchanges.

He also could require the registration of any or all individuals engaged in the management, or control, of any industrial enterprise, and could set up a licensing system for various types of business.

Violation of the proposed law would be punishable by fines up to $100,000 fine or a year's imprisonment or both.

LUDWIG FOR 'HUMANE' WAR

Historian Sees Hope in 'Congress of Nations'

(In the accompanying statement Emil Ludwig, world-famous historian and biographer of President Roosevelt, Napoleon, Bismarck and others, strongly supports the movement urged by William Randolph Hearst to put an end to war barbarity. He advocates that the "Congress of Nations" proposed by Mr. Hearst to inaugurate the great humanitarian reform to be held in Philadelphia.)

By EMIL LUDWIG

(Noted Historian, Biographer and Writer on World-wide Topics)

(Special Cable Dispatch)

LONDON, Feb. 26—The proposed "Congress of Nations" I would call one of the best ideas of Mr. Hearst's long activity.

Being as long an advocate of the League of Nations as Mr. Hearst has been its adversary, I share the view of President Roosevelt, who has at different times called notice to the fact that the withdrawal of the United States from the League was decisive for its failure.

This being so, we must look out after eighteen years of almost impotent transactions at Geneva, for new forms of co-operation.

Such a "Congress of Nations," at its first meeting, which would have limited scope "to formulate and enforce rules of civilized warfare," might become the basis of a new understanding.

Let me add that two conditions should exist for such a realization:

1—Do it now! Do not wait until a European war breaks out, which is more imminent than Americans generally realize.

2—Do it in America! To a sick man the doctor orders a change of air and surroundings. European politicians meeting in America would have regenerative consequences, like a stay in the Alps.

Do not meet in Washington, where there are too many Europeans. Take an entirely American town like Philadelphia. This city, like Paris, holds in its heart a tradition of great political evolution.

You will find no better frame for your Congress than that symbolic hall where the immortal principles of humanity became the foundation of a new nation.

Humanity, so cruelly violated by new war methods, is calling for help in all nations.

Let us bring back the times, through the laws proposed by Mr. Hearst, when aggressive war was the business of mercenaries, paid for the risk of being killed, and who had no other profession or duties.

Every citizen, proud to be the protector of his country, should be saved, by international laws, in his peaceful work, together with the women and children, who are the nations' guarantee of the future.

Strangely enough, new dogmas of aggressive states, which so intensely concentrate on the future of their youth, are the same that order the bombing of other nations' children.

Therefore, if governments are too cautious, or too weak to take the initiative, let us follow the proposal of the powerful Hearst newspaper group and develop the most popular propaganda for the first Congress to save humanity—in Philadelphia.

Roosevelt Denies Planes Edge Ships

Says Defense Always Found Against New Weapons of Attack In War

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today in a discussion of the relative merits of airplanes and battleships that always in the past when any new weapon of warfare was invented an antidote had been discovered for it.

Roosevelt had been asked at his press conference what he thought of talk in some quarters that the increasing effectiveness of aircraft had greatly limited the usefulness of great warships.

He said that in the whole history of warfare new weapons had usually been hailed as changing the whole course of offense and defense but that no single weapon had long remained supreme.

DEFENSIVE WEAPONS

In the case of the airplane, he said, defensive weapons were the anti-aircraft gun and the defense airplane.

Asked whether he thought battleships had increased or decreased in efficiency, the President replied that they had both increased and decreased since the World War.

Another newsman inquired whether the Chief Executive had seen reports on rumored secret army and navy tests of armaments, specifically with regard to water and aircraft and whether he was in accord with the findings.

Roosevelt said he had been seeing such tests since 1913, and that with regard to the argument over the relative efficiency of air and water craft his recent recommendations to Congress were the best answer.

SAYS PRESENT PLAN O. K.

In his special message on defense he recommended a $1,000,000,000 warship construction program.

The discussion turned then to general defense policies and the Chief Executive indicated he thought little of suggestions for a single department of defense. He said the present system was working very well.

The suggestion for a single department, he recalled, goes back to pre-World War days, and he added that during the war the present system worked quite effectively.

Another inquirer asked whether the President had noted any evidence of friction between the army and navy. The questioner explained there were reports at the capitol that the navy found it easier to get appropriations than the army.

Roosevelt, chuckling at this remark, said the services were working together better today than at any previous time.

At about the same time the President was talking, the navy's chief of aeronautics told Congress that "airplanes have not supplanted ships."

Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook testifying before the House naval committee on the proposed $1,050,000,000 expansion of the fleet, asserted the 950 new planes contemplated under the program would add another $106,000,000 to the total cost.

He said the projected enlargement of the navy amply justified the provision of additional planes. Launching at once into the controversy over the vulnerability of battleships to aerial attack, Cook said:

"Airplanes have not supplanted ships, but they have added tremendously to the power and efficiency of the fleet as a whole."

OBJECT TO INJURE FOE

The admiral, a pilot of ten years' experience, told the committee "the offense mission" of the navy's air forces was not to attempt to sink enemy battleships but to so severely injure them that the American fleet would have "a marked superiority."

PLANES, TENDERS NEEDED

At the House naval committee hearing Admiral Cook also was asked if he knew of "secret tests" showing the extreme vulnerability of battleships. Cook said he did not.

Cook asserted one of the navy's greatest needs was for more patrol planes and tenders to make them mobile.

Questioned as to the relative efficiency of air and surface craft, Cook said it would require 450 airplanes to deliver in one hour the same offensive fire of which one battleship is capable.

To equal the firing power of 15 battleships, the present number in the fleet, Cook said, would require 6750 airplanes.

From the standpoint of cost, Cook said the 15 battleships would represent an expenditure of something over $1,000,000,000 and would last 26 years. The 6750 airplanes which he said must be replaced every eight years, would cost $7,678,125,000.

Vinson Declares Big Navy Not To Breed War

Defensive Program U. S. Aim, Says Board Chairman

By REP. CARL VINSON
CHAIRMAN, HOUSE NAVAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE
Special to Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—The country should thoroughly understand that we are not proposing to increase our navy for the purpose of attacking any foreign shores.

The increased building is not for aggression. We are not asking for this increase to get entangled in any alien quarrel, nor to make the world safe for democracy.

This is strictly a defensive program. The increase asked for in the pending naval building bill is solely for the purpose of affording protection to continental United States and our insular possessions.

Recent political developments in Europe forcibly impress upon us the wisdom of a policy of "no aggression or entangling commitments."

But, at the same time, the world political situation drives home to us the absolute necessity of having a strong navy to protect this country, standing alone.

Somerville Judge Backs Hearst Humane War Plan

Praise for the William Randolph Hearst proposal for a world congress to outlaw barbarism in war was given by Judge Felix A. Forte of Somerville as he endorsed the plan.

"Mr. Hearst's suggestion should be strongly supported by every thinking person because it is the one course of action that can save mankind from a return to savagery in the event of another world catastrophe," said Judge Forte.

Judge Forte, who was Republican candidate for attorney-general in the last state election, is a prominent political leader. His work as a faculty member at Harvard and Boston University has strengthened his position as a ranking Massachusetts jurist and he spoke for many members of the legal profession when he said:

"Warfare against innocent noncombatants such as is being carried on today in Spain and China is warfare against humanity and civilization—if continued unrestricted by warring nations it will drive mankind back to the dark ages.

"Mr. Hearst's editorial should be accepted as more than a timely warning. Citizens of all countries, in all walks of life, should do their utmost to see that the campaign to end war inhumanities is carried out."

Senator Walsh Explains U. S. Navy Expansion

By SENATOR DAVID I. WALSH
Chairman, Senate Committee on Naval Affairs.
Special to Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—The American naval expansion program now being considered by Congress has no relationship whatever to any contemplated plans of aggression between the United States and any other country in the world.

Our people desire and are willing to appropriate all funds for naval defense that are necessary and essential, in view of present conditions throughout the world, for our safety and protection. Our people, however, are unalterably opposed to any diplomatic or military policy that even appears to smack of an aggressive attitude.

IANS AGGRESSION

The American people would not permit the expenditure of one dollar at this time for any plan for enlarging our navy with the view of waging an aggressive war, or with the view of entering into any international police force alliance.

In my opinion it is unfortunate that the impression appears to be growing in this country and throughout the world that we may be moving away from an attitude of strict neutrality and from an interest in our national defense on the basis of what may be absolute defense needs.

POLICY WELL CONSIDERED

The present measure for the expansion of our naval defenses, in my opinion, is likely to be jeopardized unless it is made clear and certain that we are acting for ourselves, free from agreements or understandings with any other nations.

The expiration of the treaties for the limitation of armaments on December 31, 1936, placed upon the American government the obligation of establishing a new naval policy. Prior to that date, its naval policy was that defined in the various naval armament limitation agreements that had been in existence for 14 years.

Since December 31, 1936, the naval and other officials of our government have been considering, as was their bounded duty, a new naval policy in view of the absence of that measure of safety and protection that we had a right to assume under those armament treaties.

That a new naval program, necessarily of an increased nature, was essential in view of the termination of these treaties, was obvious to all Americans who were familiar with world conditions, and particularly with the rapid expansion of armaments throughout the world, together with the unrest and disturbed conditions and to new political philosophies that were springing up and rapidly changing existing forms of government.

2 Titled Britons Die in Air Crash

Dense Fog Traps Plane In California; Friend Hurt

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Feb. 25—Doctors today were fighting to save the life of James Lawrence, of London, injured when a plane crashed near here killing Lord and Lady Plunket and the plane's pilot.

The accident happened in a dense fog.

The injured victim, a traveling companion of the Plunkets, is the son of Sir Walter Lawrence, wealthy Londoner. He is popular in London society.

Lord Plunket, sixth baron of his line and member of a noted Irish family, and her ladyship, the daughter of Fannie Ward, famous American stage beauty, were trapped in the cabin and were burned to death when fire destroyed the wrecked plane.

CRASHES IN FOG

Pilot T. J. "Tex" Phillips was thrown clear, but apparently had died instantly from the impact of striking the earth.

The injured passenger was found unconscious just outside the cabin and was dragged to safety by Postmaster Roy Summers of San Simeon.

He was rushed to a hospital here. His injuries were said to be critical.

Phillips became lost in the thick, black fog while on a flight north from Los Angeles in a Vultee cabin plane, owned by the Los Angeles Examiner and the San Francisco Examiner.

Realizing the danger, Phillips had turned back and was flying toward Los Angeles when the craft crashed a mile and a half south of a landing field at San Simeon. The nose of the plane, pointing south, was buried deeply in the earth.

No one witnessed the accident. Postmaster Summers had heard the sound of motors behind the veil of fog, followed by the rending crash of the plane plowing into the earth.

Summers jumped into his automobile and hurriedly drove the short distance to the scene of the tragedy.

BALKED BY FLAMES

Lawrence lay close to the wreck, and the postmaster managed to drag him into a safe place just as fire began licking the plane. He returned in an effort to save Lord and Lady Plunket, probably already dead, but the roaring fire drove him back as he struggled to open the cabin door.

Summers called for assistance and a car for the removal of Lawrence to a local hospital.

Weather conditions were favorable at the time of the take-off for the northward flight, and the single-motored Vultee was reported to be equipped for "blind flying."

Lord Plunket was an Irish member of Parliament and his wife, a lady-in-waiting for Queen Elizabeth of England, Phillips, a veteran airman, resided in Burbank and is survived by his widow and a daughter by a previous marriage.

PLANNED LONG VISIT

Lord and Lady Plunket and Lawrence, their friend of long standing, had rented the home of Bill Hines, former movie star, and had planned to remain in Hollywood for two months because of the climate and attractions there.

Her ladyship was the widow of Captain Jack Harnain, royal air corps flier who was killed in a crash.

Ickes Now Asks $50,000 for Publicity

Says Bathroom Yarn Played Out in House Talk

By ROBERT HUMPHREYS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—"Honest Harold" Ickes, forthright Secretary of Interior, who also doubles in brass as the New Deal's No. 1 epithet hurler, wants a publicity bureau.

It appears that in the rush of other cabinet officers to set up publicity departments, "Honest Harold" got left out in the cold. He never got one.

The whole matter can be righted for the small sum of $50,000, he told a House appropriations subcommittee in testimony made public today.

The proposed department would be called "the division of information."

WATCH DOG ON JOB

"Honest Harold," who has had to struggle along with little front page items concerning his magnificent bathroom in the new $18,000,000 Interior Department building, "60-family" speeches, and a squib here and there concerning PWA projects which have totaled $5,000,000,000 in five years, told the committee "we badly need this division of information."

"We have never had a division of information," he sighed, "We have been relying on the WPA during the last five years for that.

"When we compare our situation with that of the Agricultural Department, for instance, we find that we have, perhaps, been rather derelict in not presenting the matter frankly."

Rep. ("Where-Are-You-Going-to-Get-the-Money") Rich of Pennsylvania, G. O. P. watchdog of the Treasury, couldn't stand it any longer.

WINS INCREASE

"In this division, which eventually is going to cost $100,000 or $200,000, are we going to have the same propaganda in your department that is now going on in the Department of Agriculture?" he blurted.

"No," Ickes remarked. "I do not think we could ever be so expert."

He recalled, more or less sadly, that the bathroom story was played out.

"A great many of our activities do not make the newspapers." "Honest Harold" declared. "They put in only one bathroom when they built the building, and it will last for a long time. We cannot hope to make the front page for a long time to come."

The committee denied Ickes' request for a division of information, but as a compromise gesture, granted him a $30,000 increase in funds for office personnel.

2 Brothers Win Race to Dying Mother

Dash From Coast by Auto, Airplane to Boston Hospital

Death early today brought a tragic end to the dramatic race of two brothers from California to the bedside of their mother at Robert Breck Brigham Hospital in Roxbury.

The mother, Mrs. Fannie J. Dolan of Warren street, Roxbury, died at 1:55 this morning but not until the trans-continental race of the brothers by automobile, airplane and police escort had been won.

Jerome Dolan, 39, and his brother, Edward, 27, were contacted last Saturday in the California film colony when the condition of their mother became grave.

START BY AUTO

In Jerome's automobile they set out immediately for Boston.

Mrs. Dolan took a bad turn yesterday and police were called in the hope that they could intercept the brothers by radio.

In New York the car was located and an officer told the brothers that the family had advised that they speed up the trip by taking a plane.

FINISH IN PLANE

With a New York police escort they were hurried to the Newark airport only to find new difficulties confronting them. The next passenger plane had room for only one passenger.

Edward took the sole accommodation and word was flashed to Boston for a police escort to the hospital. Jerome obtained a seat on the following flight and another escort rushed him to the hospital.

They joined five sisters at the bedside and were there several hours before Mrs. Dolan finally passed away.

Fair Director Orders Sculptures Draped

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25 (AP)—A couple of undraped statues turned out by sculptor David Slivka will have to undergo considerable plastic surgery to meet Director Harris Connick's approval for the Golden Gate International Exposition next year.

Connick ruled the statues must be remodeled or draped so the fair will be "a safe place for mothers and young children."

The pieces in question are "Fertility," a large female figure holding a pear, and "Abundance," a male figure clothed in nothing more than a sheaf of wheat slung over the shoulder. Connick said "Fertility" suggested failure of the fig leaf crop.

"The statues would make strong men blush," Connick said today.

O'Connor Girl Verdict Probed

Father of Victim Causes Inquiry

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25 (AP)—Judge Joseph Sloane today ordered an investigation of the jury which last week acquitted Mary O'Connor in the death of five-year-old Nancy Glenn.

Miss O'Connor, 19-year-old physical education student, had been charged with murder, manslaughter and involuntary manslaughter in the death of the child she testified she struck accidentally and left for dead in a mud puddle.

After reading a letter from Joseph C. Glenn, father of the dead girl, expressing suspicion over the conduct of the O'Connor jury deliberations, Judge Sloane directed Assistant District Attorney John H. Maurer to conduct the investigation in cooperation with a legislative commission which is studying the administration of the state's criminal courts.

Hyde Park Pair Face Court in Break

Ending a trail extending for more than a year, during which they served 10 months and five days in a Florida chain gang, two 17-year-old Hyde Park youths were given two-year suspended sentences today in West Roxbury court.

They were charged with breaking and entering and larceny, in January, 1937, at the home of Josephine Fisher, Childs street, Hyde Park, proprietor of a Hyde Park news agency.

From her home the boys are alleged to have taken a metal box containing $420 in cash, $135 worth of jewelry, some letters and valuable stocks and bonds.

Most of the jewelry and all except $10 shares of the stock have been recovered, and today's suspension of sentence to the industrial school was on condition that they make restitution of the $420 cash.

'Driver Clinic' Set for Vassar

Girls Will Undergo the Harvard Tests

When boy meets girl—a better woman automobile driver will result.

This, believe it or not, is what Vassar College girls hope will happen all week when a "driver clinic" is conducted by the Harvard Bureau for Street Traffic Research.

The Harvard bureau stated today that Vassar authorities sought the aid of the clinic after several fatal accidents.

The girls will undergo tests for vision, brake reaction, steering, speed estimation and vigilance.

Of course, the bureau hopes to obtain some very important data about women drivers.

Just who has been selected to make the coveted Poughkeepsie, N. Y., trip was not revealed—other than the brief announcement that he was a Harvard graduate.

But Harvard traffic bureau officials have assured the girls two things:

He suit will be pressed and his hair cut—because the bureau is paying for both.

Ice-Box Treatment Used To Aid Cancer Patients

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25—A spectacular "human ice-box treatment" for cancer, successfully demonstrated in some cases regarded as "hopeless," has been developed by two doctors at Temple University here, according to a report to the American College of Surgeons.

The doctors, Temple Fay and George C. Henny, do not claim a "cure for cancer," but merely submit the results of their experiments as indicative of important clues. Nevertheless, the theory underlying their novel treatment, which has given unexpectedly striking "relief" in certain most advanced cases, challenges cancer research scientists with dramatic emphasis.

GET FINANCIAL AID

Encouraged by Dr. James Ewing, famous cancer authority of Memorial Hospital, New York, and supported financially by the International Cancer Research Foundation, Drs. Fay and Henny carried out experimental treatments at the Temple University here.

The treatment consisted in putting the entire body of a patient in state of hibernation, corresponding to the winter sleep of certain animals.

Also, cold was applied locally to cancerous regions of the body.

When temperature was lowered relief from cancer symptoms was conspicuous.

WOMAN TREATED

The hibernation-cold treatment was given to "M. V.," woman 36 years old, who came into the Temple University Hospital suffering from breast cancer which had spread all over the body, including spine, skull, ribs, legs.

Virtually paralyzed and rapidly growing blind, she was "hibernated" by X-raying of pituitary, thyroid and other glands. That is, by slowing action of these temperature raising glands, the whole body was "chilled" inside.

In three weeks, she improved enough to leave the hospital. For the past 14 months now, she has been living a normal life, doing house work. X-rays show cancer cleared in the brain and most other parts of the body.

Authorities said that Cole, in some manner not yet known, obtained a key to the hot water supply and filled the tub himself before the plunge.

The attendants, whose names were not revealed, were suspended while authorities attempted to fix responsibility for Cole's possession of the key.

Schuschnigg's Bow to Duce Seen 'Swan Song' By Nazis

would be no deviation from the Christian, authoritarian course first mapped by the anti-Nazi Chancellor Dollfuss.

The Nazis here had been arrested and herded behind bars when they objected violently to Schuschnigg's assertion that "Austria will remain free and for this we will fight until death."

In his speech, Schuschnigg steered Austria into the Hitler camp, but almost in the same breath reserved for his nation the right to remain independent of Nazi Germany and other powers.

Police in Vienna, Graz and other cities were kept busy quelling the resultant riots and putting the angry Nazis behind jail bars. Today, however, it appeared that the Nazis had the "last laugh."

DUCE VISIT REPORTED

Meanwhile, it was rumored in diplomatic circles here that Schuschnigg will shortly visit Premier Mussolini in Rome.

It also was learned that Schuschnigg had earnestly urged Austrian newspaper editors to preserve the Austro-German press truce.

Austria's right of freedom, said Schuschnigg, was guaranteed by Hitler himself in the Berchtesgaden "truce" agreement. Schuschnigg capped his "declaration of independence" with a ringing phrase: "Heil Austria," and he added:

"The will to freedom of the Austrian people and the inner worth of our country stand like a wall. Nothing is changed in this respect. We trust in God, who will not abandon our country, because we are resolved there is no doubt regarding our victory."

between London and Moscow," government controlled papers said, editorially, asking: "Will she go hand in hand with British foreign policy or not?"

The question was seen to presage France following into the four-power alliance rather than face isolation in Western Europe.

Hitler likewise declared for the return of Germany's war lost colonies in his address to the Nazi party veterans.

He declared:

"Germany has become a powerful, united Reich again . . . our claim to colonies is irrevocable, just as is our claim to equality."

The German dictator reaffirmed his desire for peace, "but peace with honor," as he described his government's new, gigantic building projects, saying:

"It is just on account of these plans that Germany desires nothing more ardently than peace, but a peace of understanding and honor."

Hitler reiterated his confidence in the solidarity of his party and people behind his program. He asserted:

"I am convinced that the Nazi party and the entire German nation will never desert me."

Japanese Hail Bombs on Front Of 200 Miles

New Air Raids Aim To Curb Chinese Plane Attacks

SHANGHAI, Feb. 25 (INS) — Japanese war planes today resumed wide-scale bombing activities against China, dropping missiles on cities along 200 miles of the coastline south of Hangchow.

Nipponese officials said the air fleets bombed airports at Chuchow, Fuchow, Changchow, Amoy and Nanyuang, destroying Chinese hangars and many planes.

They admitted, however, that the Japanese lost two planes in the Nanyuang raid.

At Peiping, Japanese authorities issued a communique stating all key points in northern Honan province had been occupied by the Japanese forces, which now are launching a mass attack against Linghsi, 70 miles southwest of Taiyuanfu, having already captured Sihsien, strategically important city 50 miles southwest of Taiyuanfu.

The new air raids evidently were aimed at ripping Chinese aerial assaults upon Tokyo and other populous centers in Japan, which Japanese officials fear the Chinese soon may attempt on a large scale.

'Cage' Tipsy Cure Stirs Woburn

the loan of a lion cage—one to start with—from an animal farm.

PLANS "SPOTLESS" CITY

His other plans to make the city "spotless" were:

Rid Woburn of all gambling enterprises.

Cut down the number of patrolmen from 17 to 12.

Rigid enforcement of all laws.

The mayor said that in 1927 there were 12 patrolmen with the city population 18,534. The population now, he said, was 19,695.

"We don't need two police officers in cruiser cars," he went on. "Only one is needed. The other usually reads the newspapers. I've seen it."

While most of the protest on the mayor's proposed "drink cure" plan came from surrounding cities and towns, he found some support in Woburn.

Mrs. M. A. Burnes, president of the Woburn temperance union, stated that she thought it was a good idea.

Ella Knowlton, representing the General Welfare Class of the First Unitarian Church, called on the mayor today and said that the plan was "elegant."

But the plan gave operators of the state-wide teletype system something to relieve the monotony of routine police messages.

STARTED IT

An anonymous operator started it when he flashed:

"Good morning boys, how would you like to be a cop in Woburn and drive the circus wagon?"

To which another, equally anonymous teletyper replied:

"Who will I find when a hand?"

The next message suggested putting Mayor Kane into the cage and other banter followed, climaxed by:

"Inquiry—has the parade of the bird cages started yet?"

BENSON CAGES READY

John T. Benson, operator of a New Hampshire animal farm revealed today he has both a lion and a tiger cage ready to ship to Woburn as soon as the mayor orders it.

"Mayor Kane can have the cage as long as he likes," Benson declared.

Mayor Kane had also declared he was going to get $10,000 a year out of bingo games for the city's poor or take over operation of beano in the city's name.

Japs Told U. S. Won't Quit China

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (INS)—The American government has notified the Japanese government in a firmly-worded note that it will not comply with Japanese requests of February 3 that American and other nationals in the Central China war zone be evacuated.

The American note, handed to the Japanese authorities on February 18 by American Ambassador to Tokyo Joseph C. Grew, did not make technical use of a phrase refusing the Japanese demand, but took the offensive.

STATES POSITION

The phraseology of the note, it was explained at the State Department, advised the Japanese bluntly that there rested upon the American nationals in China no obligation whatever to take precautionary measures requested by the Japanese towards safeguarding American lives and interests.

The note, said Secretary Hull—direct quotations were not permitted—advised the Japanese that precautionary measures for safety of American nationals have voluntarily been taken, but that this by no means removed Japanese responsibility for injury to American life and property in the war zone.

CITES JAPANESE DUTY

These measures will continue voluntarily to be taken, the note went on, but irrespective of whether American nationals do or do not take the voluntary advices of this Government for their safety, the obligation remains on military authorities to exert utmost precaution that American nationals and property shall not be injured by military operations.

Slight to Hitler Angers Berlin

BERLIN, Feb. 25 (AP)—Austria's Chancellor Schuschnigg had the opportunity to rally to Hitler, he failed to seize it and therefore must go into the discard—this is the reaction of a number of leading Nazis in Berlin.

Their concern is because Schuschnigg did not praise Germany's Hitler in his speech to the Austrian parliament, broadcast in Germany.

Prominent Nazis in a series of midnight interviews prefaced their remarks by emphasizing they were not speaking for Fuehrer Hitler, but held that their viewpoint was that of Nazis generally.

"Why did Schuschnigg not find the same general words for Hitler as our Fuehrer found Sunday for the Austrian chancellor?" the Nazis asked.

"We have the police and the ministry of the interior as well as large sections of the army. Austria is ours."

(The Austrian Interior Minister Seyss-Inquart is pro-German and friendly to the Nazis.)

No Chinese are piloting the new planes. The government, now centered at Hankow, is unwilling to risk new and costly planes in amateur hands.

Austria Support By Italy May Block Nazis

Lord Halifax Named To Succeed Eden In Cabinet

LONDON, Feb. 25 (AP)—Italian support of Austrian independence may give Britain, the needed aid to block further German dominance of central Europe, diplomatic sources said today.

Chancellor Schuschnigg in his speech to the Austrian Diet and nation yesterday warmly praised Italy's Premier Mussolini as one who understood Austria's problems and "always tried to avoid any impressions of interference in our internal affairs."

This friendly reference must mean, diplomatic quarters here said, that Mussolini previously had reassured Schuschnigg of his continued interest in Austrian independence — despite denials from Rome of any new pledges.

The other possibility was that Schuschnigg was praising Il Duce in an adroit move to bind Mussolini to him in his determination to fight for Austrian sovereignty and against the rise of Nazidom.

AIDS BRITISH POLICY

It is believed here that new Italian support for Austrian independence, in addition to the Rome protocol pledge, would give Prime Minister Chamberlain a stronger hand in achieving a two-fold aim:

1—Blocking of further German dominance of Central Europe. (Hitler won a point by placing Nazi-inclined ministers into the Austrian cabinet and has avowed Germany the protector of all German minorities.)

2—Regaining Mediterranean security.

Viscount Halifax, hitherto Lord President of the Council and former Viceroy of India, today was formally named Foreign Secretary in spite of the Labor party's sharp warning the appointment would raise a constitutional issue.

Prime Minister Chamberlain announced that Lord Halifax, his emissary on a special visit to Reichsfuehrer Hitler last November, would take over the post vacated by Anthony Eden, who declined to follow Chamberlain's "realistic" foreign policy.

BUTLER GETS POST

R. A. Butler, former undersecretary for India, was named parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs to represent the foreign office in the House of Commons.

Chamberlain, however, will deal with all important matters of foreign policy in Commons, since Lord Halifax, as a peer, cannot answer questions in that House.

The announcement that King George "was pleased to approve" Lord Halifax's appointment came after Commons had adjourned for the week-end.

Hostilities gave added significance to Chamberlain's assurance to Parliament that the crisis resulting in Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's resignation was precipitated by the urgency for starting Anglo-Italian friendship talks quickly.

CHAMBERLAIN ACTS

Eden, who quit rather than deal with the Fascist states under what he considered pressure tactics, carried his defense to his Warwickshire constituency today.

While he spoke tonight at Leamington, his followers said more than 3000 meetings were arranged in his behalf.

Chamberlain, with both House of Commons and Lords majorities voicing him support, went ahead with his plans for three-cornered British-Italian-German talks for peace.

Baron, 3 Others Jailed as Spies

METZ, France, Feb. 25—Four prisoners, one of them a German baron, were sentenced to serve a total of 47 years in prison by a secret military court here on a charge of being principals in an important spy ring.

The leader of the ring, who escaped, was sentenced to 20 years prison by default. He was identified as Hans Lorenz, a Berlin merchant.

The quartet caught and sentenced was identified as Baron Rudolf von Juchen, sentenced to 15 years; Col. William Albrecht, 15 years; Dr. Walter Hartmann, 12 years, and Henri Nolte, five years.

Soviet Red Army Now 'Universal'

Comintern Sees it World's Workers' Protector

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, Feb. 25—The Red army of Soviet Russia is now officially designated as the army of the working people of the world and should command their allegiance, according to a proclamation of the Comintern, of which the American Communist party is a constituent section.

Seconding Stalin's recent sensational call to the workers of the world to fight for the Soviet Union, the executive committee of the Communist International in Moscow has just come out with a message to the red army which frankly avows its bond with the Soviet government.

The text of the message, which has just reached this country, follows in part:

"The executive committee of the Communist International sends ardent greetings to the workers' and peasants' Red army and navy on their 20th anniversary.

"PRIDE OF PEOPLE"

"The heroic Red army is the pride not only of the Soviet people, but also of the entire international proletariat. It is deservedly loved not only by the working people of the Soviet, but also by the working people of all lands.

"In the shape of the Red army the Soviet and international working class possesses the first Socialist army in the world, the defender of the rule of th working people liberated from exploitation.

". . . The backbone of the strength of the Red Army is love and support both of the masses of the people of the U. S. S. R. and of the working people of the whole world.

"The International working class knows that the Red army is trained in the spirit of the unity of the interests of the workers of all lands, that it is strong in the Socialist consciousness of its men and commanders. That is why it is the army of the workers of all hands.

"DESTROYS BONDS"

"By means of incessant diatribe and slander, the Capitalists and their lackeys strive to destroy the bonds between the working class of the U. S. S. R. and the workers of other countries, in order to deprive both of mutual support in the struggle against war and Fascism.

"All the more necessary is it precisely now to strengthen the fraternal bonds of the workers of all the capitalist countries with the Soviet working class, and to achieve, as rapidly as possible, the establishment of united action by the international labor movement.

"Let the Fascist warmongers take note that should they dare to attack the land of Soviets, the international working class will be able to mobilize all its forces in defense of the U. S. S. R.

"MILLIONS OF FRIENDS"

The Fascist vultures and their accomplices will see that there are millions of friends and allies of the heroic red army in their countries, ready to rise up against Fascism, barbarism and capitalism.

"There are no forces of war and reaction which can withstand the united forces of the International Proletariat and the working people of the Soviet Union."

France Weighs Policy Plans

PARIS, Feb. 25 (AP)—The Chamber of Deputies today opened a two-day debate on foreign policy which will determine if France is to follow the British lead in "realistic" European appeasement.

The appearance by Chancellor Schuschnigg of Austria drew the praise of Ernest Peret, Popular Democrat, the first of two deputies who had requested permission to speak.

Battle New Drive For Oath Repeal

Supporters to Block Reconsideration Of Senate Tie

Supporters of the Teachers' Oath Law, victorious in a drive to retain the legislation, today prepared to block an announced move for a reconsideration on Monday of the tied Senate vote.

The Senate killed a repealing bill when they refused 18 to 18 to pass to be engrossed the measure, which the day previous they had passed to a third reading 16 to 15.

The last ditch fight placed every member of the Senate on record on the issue, which has been the political storm center of both branches of the legislature for three years.

LANGONE CREDITED

Senator Joseph A. Langone, Jr., was credited with killing the bill for repeal by a last minute change in his vote.

The first vote resulted in a 17 to 17 tie as Langone changed his vote made the day previous when he voted for repeal.

Samuel H. Wragg, president of the Senate, then asked to be recorded and sent the repealists into the lead 18 to 17.

Then Senator Cornelius F. Haley, who had not been recorded previously, swung his support for retention of the oath bill bringing the final 18 to 18 decision.

PLAN NEW DRIVE

Repealists announced a new drive in an effort to pass the legislation on to Governor Hurley. The governor announced in his inaugural message he would veto a bill to repeal just as he did last year.

In the roll call, members voting for engrossment of the repeal bill were Senators Blanchard of Cambridge; Bragkman, Roxbury; Cotton, Lexington; Goodwin, Melrose; Gunn, Montague; Hollis, Newton; Holmes, Weymouth; Miss Holmes, Brookline; Hunt, North Attleboro; Mackay, Quincy; McSweeney, Salem; Nutting, Leominster; Olander, Northampton; Oppenheimer, Springfield; Plunkett, Adams; Richardson, Winchester; Skibinksi, Chicopee, and President Wragg, Needham. Total—18.

FOES OF REPEAL

Voting against repealing the teachers oath were Senators Babcock of Haverhill; Braden, Lowell; Carroll, South Boston; Casey, Milford; Cole, Lynn; Considine, New Bedford; Donahoe, Dorchester; Giroux, Somerville; Grant, Fall River; Hajey, Rowley; Hennigan, Roxbury; Johnston, Clinton; Langone, Boston; McCooey, Worcester; Miles, Brockton; Moyse, Waltham; Nicholson, Wareham, and Selzo, Worcester. Total—18.

Not voting yesterday were Senators Burke of Dorchester and Sullivan of Chelsea, who had earlier voted against repeal; and Senators Curtis of the Back Bay and Meehan of Lawrence, who had been recorded earlier for repeal.

London Air Fleet Hunts Lost Plane

LONDON, Feb. 25 (AP)—Scores of Royal Airforce planes droned ceaselessly in dawn patrol today, searching for Britain's long distance mystery plane, missing more than 24 hours.

The plane, a specially built bomber and one of three R.A.F. planes designed for a world's non-stop flight record attempt, disappeared on a practice flight around the British Isles.

Timilty, Leaving, Places Fallon, Wall in Charge

Police Superintendent Edward Fallon and his new deputy, former Captain Benjamin Wall of the Milk street division, will be jointly charged with the conduct of the police department while Police Commissioner Timilty is away on vacation, Timilty announced today.

The announcement followed the transfer of 35 men in a move purporting to forestall a threat of "wide open" conditions while the police head is spending a few weeks at Miami.

Although the commissioner said the transfers were routine, members of the department read significance into some of them.

DECKER TRANSFERRED

One of the transfers regarded as significant was that of Patrolman Joseph Decker, who was returned to the bureau of criminal investigation, for detective work on the hotels beat, after being at the Milk street station since last April. Timilty said several hotel executives had asked to have him returned to his former duty.

Decker and Sergeant Coleman Joyce, who was transferred from the bureau of criminal investigation to the East Boston station in the same shakeup last year, were said at the time to have been moved because they helped John W. Haigis in his 1936 campaign against Governor Hurley.

Patrolman Patrick J. Prendergast, clerk at the Hyde Park station for many years and regarded as a fixture there, was unexpectedly transferred to the Fields Corner station. Patrolman George L. Haller, clerk at the Milk street station, was moved to the superintendent's office at headquarters.

PRIZE ROOKIES REVEALED

The transfers revealed for the first time the identities of Commissioner Timilty's two "prize rookies," known in the department as "the commissioner's G-men" because of their undercover work in which they were responsible to the commissioner alone. They are Patrolmen Michael F. O'Brien and Frederick J. Williams. Their transfers from the Back Bay division to the bureau of criminal investigation were in the nature of promotions.

The commissioner announced that the special racket squad of 20 rookie patrolmen in command of Lieutenant Andrew Markhard would be returned to traffic duty March 1. He said their work in attacking gambling and other rackets had been good but that he believed a spring drive to improve downtown traffic conditions to be of great importance.

The three sergeants transferred were:

Sergeants — John J. Crossen, North End, to Jamaica Plain; George F. Weckbacher, Jamaica Plain, to West Roxbury; Thomas J. Kearns, West Roxbury to North End.

Bay State Group Protests Pact With Britain

Associated Industries Warns Treaty Perils Workers Here

Protesting the proposed trade treaty with Great Britain, the Associated Industries of Massachusetts today informed the Committee for Reciprocity at Washington that such an agreement would be detrimental to the best interests of 40 per cent of the workers in the Commonwealth.

In a brief filed with the committee, the manufacturers association warned that "the welfare of the sovereign states is not a matter to be dismissed lightly" and asserted:

"A thin spreading of benefit throughout the rest of the country is not sufficient justification for causing an enormous injury to the workers of this Commonwealth."

The list of products to be considered in drawing up the reciprocal pact "reads like a list of Massachusetts products," the brief declared.

It stated further that in addition to the workers affected by the treaty with the United Kingdom, another 10 per cent were adversely affected by a proposed trade agreement with Czechoslovakia.

In considering the agreement, for which negotiations are about to begin, the manufacturers requested the State Department remember that:

"The products on which the United States is considering granting tariff reductions to the United Kingdom are, for the most part, those upon the manufacture of which the Commonwealth of Massachusetts relies for the support and maintenance of her citizens.

"Products of the United States which will benefit from this trade agreement are not those which are produced in Massachusetts. The disparity between the possibilities of benefit to Massachusetts and the certainty of detriment is so great that the entire matter is one we feel should receive the most serious consideration of this committee and the State Department."

Override Veto On Jobs Bill

Overriding of Governor Hurley's veto on the bill requiring preferential employment of local workers on state highway projects today assured residents of towns outside Boston of thousands of jobs.

The bill, veto of which was defeated 146 to 67 in the House, demands that 75 per cent of those put on road projects be taken from the district in which the project is being carried out.

Republican members who fought to put the bill through declared it would end the practice of shipping bus-loads of Boston workers into the state's smaller communities, leaving local men idle.

Democratic members who fought to sustain the veto said that inasmuch as Boston and its suburbs pay the bulk of gasoline taxes financing the projects, its unemployed should be given work.

Kelly Hits Hurley On Judgeship

Accusing Governor Hurley of playing politics with judicial appointments, Lieutenant Governor Francis X. Kelly today demanded that he fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Frederick Fisher of Lowell last September.

The ultimatum, following a healing of the breach between the Governor and Attorney-General Paul A. Dever, came in a letter sent the chief executive by Kelly.

The lieutenant governor, asserting that his demand was made "as a result of many protests from the citizens of Lowell," charged that Governor Hurley had promised the position to five candidates and was delaying appointment for political purposes until after the forthcoming primary election.

In his missive, delivered to Paul C. Ryan, secretary to the Governor, Kelly requested that the appointment be made at next Wednesday's Executive Council meeting.

Hurley, to whom the letter was read by Ryan, made no immediate comment.

Lodge Urges Added Pay for Charwork

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—Approvi of a bill increasing wages of federal charmen and women five cents an hour was urged by Massachusetts Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

"I believe this is a modest amount for a group of citizens greatly in need," Lodge wrote Chairman McKellar of the Senate Postoffice Committee.

Seize 2 in Looting Of 5 Eastern Banks

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (AP)—Federal agents counted the robberies of five eastern banks and the holdup of a bank messenger as solved today with the arrest of Peter "Cowboy Pete" Colavecchio, 27, and Guido "Scarface" D'Allesandro, 31.

Colavecchio had boasted he never would be taken alive, but when surrounded on Second avenue federal agents said he "fell upon his knees" begging them not to shoot him.

2 Hikes, Fishing Planned by MDC

The triple outdoor program postponed last Sunday will be carried out Sunday in the Ponkapoag section of the Blue Hills under the MDC-WPA recreation unit.

Two hikes through the Blue Hills, and a fishing party are on. An eight-mile hike will start at 11 a. m. from the end of the Ponkapoag bus line. The fishing party will assemble at the same time and spot.

Harry Higbee will lead nature lovers through this same section of the hills in the afternoon at 2:30.

Week-End Ski Trip Planned by Tufts

Tuckerman's Ravine, one of the most famous skiing locations in the country, has been selected by the Tufts Ski Club for their weekend trip for tomorrow and Sunday. Oxen Yoke Lodge in North Conway has been reserved for the club's use, and an oldtime guide has been retained by the members.

While the more experienced skiers will attempt Tuckerman's Ravine itself for fast and exciting skiing, the novices will find plenty of opportunity for enjoyment on the lesser slopes.

State Jobless Board Defends Its Actions

Declares Delay in Sending Checks Is Due Faulty Cards

Harrassed by a mounting storm of criticism because of delayed unemployment benefit checks, officials of the State Unemployment Compensation Commission today defended the efficiency of their organization.

While letters of protest from persons throughout the State who believe they are entitled to the benefits poured in, officials declared that in the majority of cases the fault lay with the applicants rather than the commission.

BLAME APPLICANTS

Part of the delay, it was asserted, is due to the fact that 5000 applications are in the process of investigation." However, it was pointed out, that a delay of 5000 in a total of 200,000 registered is a comparatively good showing.

Former Governor Frank G. Allen, a member of the commission, stated that while a certain percentage of error must be allowed in use of the gigantic tabulating machine, which sent out 76,000 checks last week alone, faulty applications are responsible for most of the delays.

He said there were three principal reasons for the late checks.

They are damaged cards that cannot be handled by the machine, delayed employer's records and unsigned applications in many cases.

The commissioner showed records revealing that between Jan. 20 and Feb. 12 193,896 checks totaling $1,916,520 were sent to benefit recipients.

LAUDS BOCAL BUREAU

"I stated last week at a legislative hearing that authorities at Washington have placed Massachusetts at the top of the list of all states in its record of compensation speed and efficiency," he said.

This contrasts with the record in another large industrial state, where a moratorium on payments became necessary because of confusion in payment operations.

Martin Proposes Treaty Delay

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (INS)—Representative Martin (R.) of Massachusetts today said he had written Secretary of State Hull urging postponement of final action on a trade treaty with Czechoslovakia until "it can be determined whether the Czech nation is to fall under complete domination of Nazi Germany."

"There are disturbing reports from Europe as to the final status of many of the Central European nations," Martin wrote Hull. "It is persistently stated Czechoslovakia may be brought under the complete domination of Germany. At this moment Czechoslovakia is plainly worried over this threat.

"Under these unsettled conditions, I suggest it would be unwise to complete a commercial treaty with Czechoslovakia at this time. I believe it would be good judgment to postpone any final decisions until the outlook becomes clearer and we know definitely whether the concessions under consideration will go to the benefit of Czechoslovakia or to Nazi Germany."

Gen. Johnson Says:

Who Can Aid G. O. P.

Vandenberg Formula Faulty

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh S. Johnson

NEW YORK, Feb. 25—Senator Vandenberg seems to think the formula for reanimation of the corpse of the Republican Party is to set up a standard upon which disgruntled Democrats can coalesce. The Senator is thinking about leading Democratic politicians.

But who is to set up such a standard? A Republican? What would happen to the Democratic barons after the victory? One of them might be put in the Cabinet and the rest would get a kick in the pants.

Mr. Roosevelt, without any talk of coalescence did that better. He put two outright Republicans plop into his Cabinet—Wallace and Ickes. He appointed two politically amorphous professional do-gooders—one in his Cabinet and one as his Santa Claus in Chief in WPA, without any regard whatever for deserving Democrats.

Woodrow Wilson's War Administration had the same sublime disregard for Democrats. But no Republican ever did anything like that and well the Bourbon politicians know that. Jim Farley is right. Any such formula would produce a coalition that would never coalesce.

It is absurd for Republicans to talk about 1940 now. Will Mr. Roosevelt be the Democratic candidate? Will Mr. Wallace's terrible farm bill not have collapsed the farm strength of the New Deal in the traditionally Republican states? Will there be any new Republican discovery of a new knight in shining armor—or any new Huey Long?

Are we going into a deeper depression or an inflationary boom? The Republicans can't know those things, and if they don't know them they can't plan.

* * *

It is not hard to imagine a situation in which this country would be as sick of Mr. Roosevelt's Third New Deal as it was of Mr. Hoover's First New Day. In any such case, all the Republicans would have to do would be to select a mahout for the same old elephant who didn't have small-pox or beat his wife.

If the conditions were as at present, no coalition would work in which the Republicans nominated a regular Republican—no matter how imitation New Dealish. The Landon fiasco should have taught them that. They could only hope to swing the middle-of-the-roaders and disgruntled Democrats by taking a Democrat like Wheeler or one of their non-reservation Indians like Bob LaFollette or LaGuardia—and let them make their campaign on the balmy blunders of the present New Deal, adhering to all New Deal come-ons for Negroes, the unemployed, and all the rest of the uneasy classes of the modern Democratic Cave of Adullam—but insisting on correcting obvious errors.

* * *

With Mr. Roosevelt not a candidate, that could be done, because he has been so nearly all or nothing that there is not a White Hope in the whole aspiring stable of Jacksons, Wallaces or McNutts that could appear as anything more than a promoted water-boy. The blunders have been so bad that even if Mr. Landon could get away with the formula—"The New Deal is O. K., but I can deal it better"—that kind of a set-up might work against any possible Democratic donkey who dared attempt the classically fatal experiment of trying to wear the lion's robe.

It's too early to tell about these things. The Republican strategy is so clearly to lie doggo and keep sniping, that premature abortive attempts to prevision 1940 are almost as silly as the triumphant and spectacular but entirely "previous" homecoming tour of High Commissioner Paul McNutt.

It is almost a political axiom that the aspiring candidate who gallops publicly way out in front too soon gets shot in the back by the troops of more cautious leaders. Mr. Roosevelt's early bird strategy in 1932 is supposed to have been an exception.

It wasn't. Mr. Roosevelt didn't gallop out. Mr. Farley burrowed out and surreptitiously served up delegates. Nobody can sew up delegates now. The future is still too foggy.

Punch Wins Fine For Ex-Trooper

An ex-state trooper was fined $100 in Chelsea court today after he was found guilty of punching his brother-in-law in the courthouse corridor.

The former policeman, William Andrews, of Dresden circle, Somerville, over six feet and weighing 200 pounds, was in court with his sister, Mrs. Helen Maloney of Mountain avenue, Revere.

Mrs Maloney had charged her husband, William, five feet nine and 150 pounds, with non-support of herself and her two children. The case was continued a week and the party trooped into the corridor.

Hardly had the door closed behind them when Andrews, according to police, turned on Maloney and punched the smaller man.

Andrews was brought back into the courtroom on order of Judge Paul J. MacDonald. Clerk Edward Canavan issued a complaint for assault and battery.

After hearing the case Judge MacDonald fined the former policeman. He appealed and bail was set at $200.

Boudoir Bandit Scares Nurses

Threatens Pair With Gun for Half Hour

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 25 (AP)—A "boudoir bandit" who held two student nurses at gunpoint half an hour in their rooming house was the object of police search here today.

Last night the Misses Betty Bryant and Mary Wing, the nurses, reported they heard noises coming from a closet. After they investigated a man, most of his face hidden by a handkerchief, walked out, pistol in hand and told them to "keep quiet."

He said no more, the nurses told police and after half an hour they begged him to leave. He then fled by a window.

Apparently, police said, the man was surprised ransacking the room and hid in the closet. Only a few cents were missing, the nurses said.

Townsend to Take Jail Fight to Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (INS)—A half hour session with legal counsel today transformed Dr. Francis E. Townsend's resignation to a 30-day jail term into a determination to "fight his case to a finish."

Following the parley, the 71-year-old Californian announced that, although he was without funds, his lawyer, Elisha Hanson, had agreed to "carry on" and appeal to the Supreme Court the sentence imposed on him for walking out on a special House committee investigating his old age pension movement.

Townsend said his decision was dictated by a realization of the "tremendous" principle involved.

The lawyer announced he would shortly petition the highest tribunal for a writ of certiorari, enabling it to review Townsend's conviction for contempt in District of Columbia Federal Court. The appellate court upheld the conviction by a 2 to 1 vote.

A stay of execution granted by the lower court when the first appeal was taken will insure Townsend liberty until the Supreme Court acts on the certiorari writ, Hanson said.

Townsend, in a prepared statement, in effect challenged the government to put him behind bars. The statement said:

"If I am free and not compelled to serve my sentence, it will mean that this 'Democratic' government has not the courage to face the barrage of criticism that is sure to ensue.

"Townsend Party" Launched on Coast

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 25 (AP)—The "Townsend Party" was launched at a mass meeting of several thousand pension advocates here last night.

The meeting sent a telegram of protest against the projected imprisonment of Dr Francis E. Townsend, founder of an old age pension movement, to the speaker of the House in Washington.

Russell T. Hind said petitions will be circulated to roll up enough signers to put the party on the ballot in November.

Hospital Aides Plead Guilty To Thefts

Three Porters Admit Larceny From Patients

In a surprise move, three former City Hospital porters, on trial in superior court for alleged larceny from patients and conspiracy to steal, suddenly pleaded guilty today, the third day of the trial.

John J. Corcoran, of High street, Charlestown, already under sentence of 15 months for larceny from a patient, pleaded guilty to larceny from the person of David J. (Beano) Breen, slain gambler, and to conspiracy.

Francis J. Murphy pleaded guilty tod conspiracy and to larceny from Robert Kelley, well known Boston sportsman.

Thomas H. Thornton pleaded guilty to conspiracy and to larceny from both Kelley and Breen.

Each was sentenced to two years in Charles street, Corcoran's 15-month sentence to be served concurrently with the two-year term.

The jury was instructed by Judge Edward T. Broadhurst to return not guilty verdicts for all three on charges of receiving stolen goods, on the ground that they could not be guilty of larceny and the receiving of the same articles at the same time.

All three porters were arrested following a probe that became one of the aftermaths of the gangland slaying of Breen in the early morning of December 17.

Rev. Laurence Farr of Farmington, N. H., today was preparing for a trip to Boston to help immigration authorities out of a dialectic tangle.

Held for deportation here is Formose Mendy, 26-year-old Senegalese from West Africa, who stowed away on a Dutch freighter bound for Boston. He cannot be given the customary hearing because no one can understand his jargon.

Rev. Farr, a former missionary, who understands many of the strange dialects there, thinks he will be able to interpret for Mendy.

Widow's Will Called Pet Her 'Only Friend'

CHICAGO, Feb. 25—Calling all old bone dealers!

Here's a dog with $30,000 to spend.

The lucky canine, pet of the late Mrs. Margaret McDermott, 70, won the money today under a court ruling which found that his owner was not incompetent when, four years ago, she drew her will leaving her entire fortune to the dog.

Two cousins of Mrs. McDermott had fought to have the will nullified.

It provides that the dog be placed in the home of some woman without children and supported on the income of the legacy.

In the document Mrs. McDermott described her pet as her one "sincere friend."

New Hampshire weather officials at 10 a. m. reported six inches of "fresh snow" at Berlin, four at Laconia, seven at Hillsboro, three at Concord, three at Woodsville and four at Plymouth.

Despite the prediction of freezing weather in Greater Boston tonight, the weatherman declared it would be warmer tomorrow and probably no snow.

Light snowfall during the night made early morning driving conditions hazardous in Greater Boston. No serious injuries were reported, however.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Nicest and most inoffensive man in the Roosevelt Cabinet is Harry Woodring, accidental Secretary of War.

Harry's life has been just one accident after another, and being very much like a cat with nine lives, he somehow manages to land on top.

Harry's first big political accident was the rift between Kansas Republicans in 1930 which found liberal Governor Clyde Reed at odds with conservative John Hamilton, now chairman of the Republican National Committee. While their backs were turned, Harry sneaked into the governor's chair in Topeka.

The next accident occurred in 1933 when Pat Malloy of Oklahoma was offered the job of assistant secretary of war, and being in a high-hat mood refused, only to wake up next morning with terrible pains of anguish to find that the vacancy had been given to Harry Woodring.

Accident No. 3 occured with the death of Secretary of War George Dern, and accident No. 4 followed close on the heels when the President discovered a law providing that no "acting" secretary of war could remain "acting" for more than 30 days. So with other things to think about in the middle of the 1936 campaign, Roosevelt made Harry his bona fide secretary of war.

Everyone expected that the President would reshuffle his cabinet after re-election and that Harry would be shuffled out.

But here the stork played into Harry's hands. He and his lovely young wife, the daughter of Senator Marcus Coolidge, have been so busy having babies that the President, being rather a paternal person, hasn't had the heart to transfer Harry elsewhere.

ACCIDENTAL AIR JUNKET—Other accidents have occurred in the life of Harry Woodring, and one of the more recent ones has been bringing him a lot of acclaim. This is the trip of the six giant Army bombers to Buenos Aires.

Real truth is that Harry vetoed this trip. The State Department put it up to him several weeks ago and urged that the planes be sent to President Ortiz's inauguration as a move to offset Bruno Mussolini's flight. But Harry said No. He did not have any planes to be wasted on a junket of this kind.

Then by the sheerest accident, a newspaperman who writes for various South American newspapers thought of the idea of sending bombers to Argentina and went to the State Department to replied that the idea had already been turned down by Woodring.

But the newspaperman, knowing how things run in the War Department, went around Woodring to his Assistant Secretary of War, Louis Johnson. Johnson, who is a dynamic, hard-hitting individual, thought the idea was grand, and immediately took it to the President.

Roosevelt was equally enthusiastic and sent a virtual order over to Woodring that six Army bombers should fly to Buenos Aires for the inauguration of the Argentine President. The President did not mention, however, that Assistant Secretary Johnson had sold him the idea. So next morning in general staff meeting, Harry Woodring announced the air junket to Argentina.

He thought he was disclosing something to Johnson for the first time and Johnson did not disillusion him. Probably not until he reads this will Harry appreciate the accident which caused him to get all the kudos and acclaim from sending the flying fortresses to Buenos Aires.

NO PHILIPPINES—Recently Harry had been offered several substitute jobs in place of being Secretary of War, one of them being high commissioner of the Philippines. But Harry says that the Philippines are no place to educate children.

It has become so apparent that the President would like to promote his Secretary of War to some other job, that Harry has become supersensitive about it, as the guests at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. "Chip" Robert the other day can bear witness.

The blonde and glamorous Evie Robert had seated Justice Stanley Reed on her right and Secretary of War Woodring on her left.

"Harry," she said, "I'm so glad you don't care anything about rank."

"No, of course not," replied the gentleman on her left, gulping a little, "and Helen (Mrs. Woodring) doesn't either."

Which, of course, is not at all true, but Harry has his moments of gallantry),

"Harry, I've got to send a message to Chip at the next table," Mrs. Robert continued. "Do you mind very much taking a message to him for me?"

The Secretary of War hesitated for one brief instant, giving Justice Reed the chance to volunteer, then jumped into action.

Unfortunately for Harry, Chip Robert, seated at another table, was not as omniscient a host as his wife thought he should be, so she had to call upon the Secretary of War three times during the dinner to remind Chip about this or that.

Finally, at the very end of the dinner, Chip was supposed to call upon Senator Barkley, the guest of honor, for a speech, and Evie had to send one final reminder to her husband. With obvious hesitation she turned to the Secretary of War for one more errand.

"Harry dear," she said, "would you mind very much being my ambassador—"

Evie never had time to finish the sentence. To the amazement of her guests, Harry Woodring, irritated and abrupt, interrupted with:

"No, Evie, I wouldn't consider being ambassador to any country. They've asked me that before."

So unless dynamited out by the President, himself, Harry Woodring is in the War Department for the duration of the New Deal combat.

19 Years Added To Lifer's Term

Joseph Pimental, 24-year-old Cambridge "strong boy" now serving life for the sex-slaying of five-year-old Chester Harris, was characterized today in superior court, by Judge Frederick W. Fosdick, as "a pervert of the worst type."

The judge's characterization was made after Pimental had been brought into court from state prison and had pleaded guilty to four more indictment charges in connection with abuse of children.

Two of the charges were filed but, on the other two, felonies, Judge Fosdick gave Pimental sentences of 9 to 10 years each in State Prison—to be served on and after expiration of his life sentence.

The "on and after" sentences were recommended by Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle because of the possibility that Pimental may eventually affer a term of years, be paroled on the life sentences.

Court attaches said they believed these were the first such sentences ever imposed in Suffolk County on a lifer.

Composer's Aim To Aid Amateurs

Paul Hindemith For Simplified Music

By RUTH MARSTERS

It occurs to us that there is something rather odd in the fact that the most advanced, and incidentally most important, living German composer should occupy himself with writing music expressly for amateurs. But that is precisely what Paul Hindemith is doing.

He is in Boston to play the viola concerto this afternoon and tomorrow evening with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It is his idea that the composer should reach the public in the language that it understands.

This does not mean to Mr. Hindemith that he, as a composer, must forego atonality, neoclassicism, and the rarified atmosphere of a symphony which amounts to shorthand as regards the understanding of the uninitiated.

MUST EDUCATE LISTENERS

It simply means that Mr. Hindemith will educate his listeners along his own line of thought.

This he has undertaken to do by the simplest—and most subtle route. And this is where the music for the amateur comes in. He simply reduced his idiom to a state where the beginner can perform upon it.

On the surface this procedure does not appear as startling, to be sure, as most of Mr. Hindemith's musical innovations.

But think. What if your first introduction to the mystery of music making had been to the 12 tone scale. What if you had never known the dearly familiar do-re-mi-fa-sol-la-ti-do or the sonata form where everything can be depended upon to work out quite as expected.

Isn't it quite likely that if you had been brought up with the 12 tone scale you would find the diatonic scale an extraordinary progression—the sonata form just too ancient a vehicle—a perambulator in which every musical thought is crazed along. (We hope you wouldn't go so far as this. You might miss a great deal. Such as—oh take Bach for instance or, if you like, Beethoven.)

FAMILIAR BASS

But the point is that you would probably see what Hindemith is up to in the light of discovery whereas Hindemith, Stravinsky, and their ilk would be reduced in your thought to the most familiar basis.

Hindemith didn't say all this. He is, as a matter of fact, extremely reticent in vouchsafing any remarks concerning himself or his music.

Right now he is concerned with music in Turkey and a new ballet for the Russian Ballet Company under Massine." He is the director of the Turkish music education system under the new regime.

The ballet "Nobilissima Visione" will be given its first performance in April in Monte Carlo with Massine in the leading role. Hindemith will conduct.

PIONEER IN MUSIC

As a composer he has written operas, oratorios, orchestral and chamber music, besides smaller works for solo instruments. He has resuscitated ancient instruments for the performance of works dating from the 13th century. He is a viola virtuoso and founded the very famous Amar String Quartet.

It will take a lot of time—at least another generation to realize the importance of what Hindemith has already done. This much we know: He has been a pioneer in contemporary music advancement; a force which stands companioned with Stravinsky in revitalizing an art which when the twentieth century found it, had all but forgotten Bach in the delirium of romanticism.

A craftsman par example, a master of counterpoint, Hindemith's peculiar idiom might, because of its formality of design, be termed cerebral except for the strong rhythmic impulse which pervades and vitalizes al be does. the mysticism latent in the early string quartets which has to give way before a humanistic tendency. And what next—there is only a question mark.

German, Soviet Flags Fly on Ships Here

Russian Vessel in Port After Riding Out 2 Storms

Even as the European political potage with its strengthened seasoning of Nazism and Communism seethed and simmered today, Boston harbor was treated to the unusual sight of the diametrically opposed symbols of these governments flaunting their colors from opposite ends of the harbor.

Docked at East Boston was the Soviet collier Maxim Gorky with the golden hammer and sickle emblem of Communism fluttering from its stern. At the Army Base was the German freighter Kersten Miles from Scandinavian ports with her black swastika whipping in the harbor breeze.

The Maxim Gorky is the first Soviet ship to visit this port in more than a year.

HAD ROUGH PASSAGE

Captained by 31-year-old Michael Griger, the Maxim Gorky, according to her officers, experienced the worst passage of her short career in her voyage from Nicolaieff, Russia, to Portland, Me.

After passing Gibraltar the Soviet ship was seized by a storm of hurricane force that had it in its grip for 10 days, her officers said.

So severe was the storm that the compass was thrown out of kilter and the officers were forced to navigate by dead reckoning until repairs could be effected, they claimed.

Mountainous seas washed over the ship to the height of the bridge, the officers stated, and they force heeled the ship over on a 45 degree angle burying one entire side of the ship under tons of water.

STORM OFF PORTLAND

Three days out of Portland the Maxim Gorky was again buffeted by storms and Captain Griger spent that period of time on the bridge without once closing his eyes.

Included in the crew list of the Soviet collier are two young Russian girls who serve as stewardesses.

While the officers of the ship are uniformed they do not command the respect nor are they the disciplinarians of the merchant marine officers of other nations are.

There is no caste system and the officers and crew members enjoy the same privileges. They eat alike and their living quarters do not differ materially.

PROVIDE FOR LEISURE

A recreation room is provided, and after the sailor off duty can shoot a game of pool, play checkers or chess and even dance with the stewardesses to the tunes of the ships phonograph.

The recreation room looks not unlike some American Communist recruiting hall. Huge red banners are stretched across its length and there are framed photographs of Stalin, Lenin and Maxim Gorky, late No. 1 Soviet novelist, fill the wall spaces. Also there is an abundance of S viet literature and government newspapers lying about to insure many hours of heavy reading.

Hedy 'Ecstasy' Lamarr Given Lead in Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor International News Service

(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 25—Hedy Lamarr's appearance on the Walter Wanger lot means that she goes into "Algiers," Charles Boyer's next picture, in one of the two femme leads.

The Lamarr, you'll remember, came here for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and was widely publicized because of her foreign movie, "Ecstasy." M-G-M did nothing with her, as in their custom with so many foreign importations, and now after six months they apparently prefer to have her make her American debut at another studio.

Certainly a break for the exotic Hungarian actress. Louella O. Parsons for Charles Boyer is one of the best actors on the screen today. After Hedy is seen in "Algiers" (formerly "Pepi Lemoko") she returns to M-G-M for a remake of "Flesh and the Devil" one of Garbo's earlier drammers, and in fairness to Miss "Ecstasy" Lamarr all the Wanger crowd raved over her test.

Bob Benchley can always get Pete's goat when he shows him his honorary fire chief badge which is the secret envy of Smith's life. Jack Chertok suggested to Pete that if he would make a plaint of the firemen's exploits, maybe he would rate a badge from the local fire department. So Pete is now deep in putting out a short entitled "Smoke Eaters" to be made with the co-operation of the Los Angeles fire department. It will contrast old and new methods of fighting the flames, and just as Pete will be doubly sure of getting that badge, he will represent Fire Chief Scott with a 16-mm print to be used in schools and in training the recruits.

When Max Reinhardt planned to bring "Danton" to the screen he had in mind a young commercial artist named Wade Crosby to play the role. Reinhardt said that Crosby, who looks like a young Charles Bickford, was perfect for the part. But the picture was postponed and Crosby's wish of a lifetime wasn't fulfilled. Today he was on the Metro-Goldwyn lot. Max cast as Danton in "Marie Antoinette" and while the part can hardly be compared to the one he would have played for Reinhardt, his dream to play the famous French revolutionist has come true.

Bad Eyesight Might Be the Reason For School Slowness

LEADING MEDICAL AUTHORITIES CLAIM IMPERFECT EYESIGHT REASON WHY SOME CHILDREN LEARN SLOWLY

It has been found that many children who learn slowly and get poor marks at school suffer from poor eyesight. Eye strain caused by nervous tension makes it difficult for children to keep up with children whose eyesight is normal.

Many children suffering from near sightedness are unable to see the blackboard or clearly see what is on the blackboard, with the result that they get poor marks through no fault of their own.

Wise parents take their children to a competent optometrist and have their eyes examined to be sure that their sight is normal. Rogers experienced State Registered Optometrists are prepared to examine the eyes of your children and to tell you whether glasses are necessary.

Modern scientific equipment especially designed to help accurate examination of eyes enables Rogers Optometrists to accurately prescribe glasses when necessary. A large selection of various styles of frames will enable you to pick a practical style for your child.

You don't need cash at Rogers. Rogers liberal credit plan makes it easy to have eyeglasses fitted and pay weekly on terms to suit your purse. No deposit is required. Terms are as low as 50c a week. Dr. B. Glickman, Dr. S. Lipsky, State Registered Optometrists in Charge.

Kills Visitor In His Home

Husband Also Shoots Wife Begging Mercy

BALTIMORE, Feb. 26 (INS)—As his wife knelt praying for him not to shoot, Charles Smith shot and killed Joseph R. Davis, city employee, and wounded his wife, Mrs. Eva Smith, seriously in the Smith home police charged.

Hiding in a bedroom, Smith rushed out and shot Davis, he admitted, according to police.

"I got down on her knees and prayed for me not to shoot her, but I shot her anyhow," Smith told police.

She fled from the house, ran a block to a parked automobile and drove away. Later she appeared at a hospital, suffering from loss of blood as the result of a wound in her neck.

THE SECRET OF HOME BAKED FLAVOR

Most all New England housewives know the true flavor of home-baked beans. Careful preparation followed by slow careful baking for 12 hours, with rich sauce and spicily pork. Just as PURITAN BEANS are prepared and baked. PURITAN BEANS—in the original heat-proof glass beanpot, for table service. Serve once and you always will.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

ENTIRELY DIFFERENT from those of the past, the next examination for police captains of the Boston department will substitute several scores of questions for the mere ten questions of other years . . . The examination will be much more embracive this year, but those prospective captains who are fearing "the orals" can dismiss this bugaboo from their minds . . . Not that the quiz will be an easy one . . . It will be difficult, and the papers will be marked (probably) by judges of the bench.

Irving Berlin's first Broadway musical since "As Thousands Cheer" will be completed in time for May production . . . Boston will see it before New York, but Sam H. Harris, Berlin's partner in all his theatrical ventures, will vote to epter the Berlin show in the fall lists . . . Judge Emil Fuchs, chairman of the unemployment compensation commission, has "thrown" many a party in his years of baseball magnateering and politicianing . . . His friends have decided to make the Judge the guest of honor at a testimonial dinner . . . The date is April 17 (Saturday night), and the banquet-room will be chosen in a few days.

Joe Geary of the Engineers' Club baseball rooting-section has leased a villa at Sarasota, where he'll be near his favorite Red Sox . . . For the second time, a playwright has chosen the melting-season for a title . . . Owen Davis wrote one several seasons ago called "Spring Freshet," and the Max Gordon production slated for the Wilbur, March 24, is entitled "Spring Thaw" . . . The Davis play had a New England background . . . The new one hasn't.

• • •

OH, THOSE TESTIMONIALS!

In the campaign by the owners of a popularpriced whiskey, observers are chuckling at this slogan: "Have you the lips of a capable critic? . . . The high brow and ascetic features of John Chapman, one of the best-groomed of the New York columnist-critics, is used to illustrate the ad . . . The copy writer indulges in a bit of flight of fancy in distinguishing (by the lips) between a "capable critic" and a just "able critic" . . . Here it is: "Lips of a capable critic . . . Thin and thin-skinned. Muscular at the edges, but soft and mobile . . . The distance of the lips from the base of the nose is longer than the average. The flesh between the lip is inclined to bulge slightly forward . . ." There is more, but this seems enough.

• • •

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:

Warren L. Bishop and his former assistant, Frank Volpe, will run it out for the Middlesex district attorneyship . . . A feature of the 10th reunion of the East Boston High School class of 1928 will be a reading of the original class prophecy and a comparison with what has happened actually . . . The event will take place in the Parker House roof-room April 29.

Former Mayor Richard Russell of Cambridge is seen as a possible candidate for governor. He is making the rounds of the banquets . . . Other announcements are: Tristen Ions (a name) to be expected from Patrick J. "Sonny" McDonough, who will seek the Senate seat held by Edward C. Carroll of South Boston, who is trying for the Suffolk sheriff's job . . . From Charles J. Fitzpatrick, who was nosed out by Executive Councillor Joseph Gronman in the last election. Fitzgerald will seek the Democratic nomination from the Second Councilmanic District again . . . From Anthony Selvitella, brother of City Councillor Henry Selvitella. He'll try for the vacant seat in the House of Representatives from East Boston, and John "Honey" Murphy, all-scholastic football player at E. B. H. S. in 1922, will be in the same contest . . . Francis Patrick Fitzgerald has aspirations to be a Democratic state committeeman from Wards 13, 15 and 16 . . . And from the Mission Hill district comes news that Frank J. Casey is "definitely a candidate" for the House in Ward 20.

Governor Hurley, former past president of the Club, will attend the Boston College Club of Cambridge dinner at the Copley Plaza tomorrow night . . . Timothy Manning, one of the secretaries to Police Commissioner Timilty, is steaming nearer to the Beach of Waikiki today. The Hawaiian trip comes as a long-deferred rest . . . School Committeeman Frederick J. Sullivan (former chairman of the committee), has resumed studies at Boston College Law School. He took a layoff from his lawbooks to run successfully for the school committee.

The mourning flags at police headquarters, in tribute to the late Deputy Superintendent Livingstone were taken down today.

A "bank robbery" not carried in the news-columns had Dr. Joseph W. Devine, the police surgeon, as victim . . . The South Boston physician has been "spoofing" fees collected from examining taxi-drivers in a child's bank . . . The bank was in his car when Dr. Devine left to examine a woman charged with larceny of several thousands of dollars . . . The purpose of the visit was to ascertain whether the woman was able to stand trial . . . While making his visit, the bank was stolen from the doctor's car.

By PEGGY DOYLE

A civil war as bitterly waged as that between the North and South split the state of California in the '70's. Historians, except for the resident Macauleys, have pretty thoroughly neglected this significant period in the settling of the West.

• • •

It's things like that that make red-blooded screen fare, decided the Brothers Warner, and their latest contribution to Americana, "Gold Is Where You Find It," proves they know their cinema. You'll find it all this week at the Metropolitan theater, where "Penrod And His Twin Brother" and ring the gifted Mauch twins, is the companion attraction.

"Gold Is Where You Find It" is a brilliant, virile picture agleam with the beauty of the sun-drenched Sacramento Valley and agog with the clamor of the California "gold war." It was one of the greatest conflicts in American history, this fight between the miners, who set up huge hydraulic monitors which washed the mountains unleashing gold-laden earth down the sluiceboxes to the stream below, and the long-entrenched agriculturists, whose fertile farms and vineyards were being menaced by this lavalike tide of black mud.

• • •

Technicolor was invented for just such a setting. Nature, in all her bountiful colors, has been so expertly captured in "Gold Is Where You Find It" that the sun actually gets in your eyes.

Equally colorful and right is the cast, headed by stalwart George Brent, lovely Olivia De Havilland, teasing Claude Rains, two-fisted Barton MacLane and coquettish Margaret Lindsay.

Brent is a young engineer, Jared Whitney, assigned by his company to supervise and speed up mining operations in Sacramento Valley. In a barroom brawl he rescues Lance Ferris, played by good-looking Tim Holt. The latter is the son of the valley's most genuinely successful land owners, prosperous high-minded Colonel Ferris (Claude Rains).

At the Ferris home the handsome engineer is introduced to 17-year-old Serena Ferris (Olivia De Havilland), who has heart trouble instantly.

Shortly before Engineer Whitney is summoned to San Francisco, Colonel Ferris tells him he must never again see Serena. The colonel's anger against this upstart mining man is augmented by young Lance's determination to become a successful mining-man and his subsequent departure for the golden city of San Francisco.

• • •

The situation between the farmers and the miners reaches a crisis when the former get a court injunction against the mining companies' tactics. Whitney is ordered to return to Sacramento Valley where the operation of the mine continues despite the legal ban.

The murder of Lance Ferris brings the trouble to a head and a massacre is averted by Whitney's cool handling of the situation.

"Gold Is Where You Find It" abounds with action. It is history at its colorful best, and Director Michael Curtiz, topflight cast and the Warner brothers are to be warmly congratulated for this splendid contribution to Americana.

Too Much Ritz for Poor Adolph

"The Goldwyn Follies," newest of the musical screen gems out of Hollywood, opened today at Loew's State and Orpheum and featured are the Ritz Brothers and Adolph Menjou. You see those Ritz boys making Adolph miserable in the above scene.

'Of Human Hearts' Thrilling Film

Unpretentious as it is heroic, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama, "Of Human Hearts," which opened at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters yesterday, is one of those rare pictures that makes you forget you are observing skilled performers.

For nearly all of its 100 minutes, this dramatic story of a simple backwoods family and the commonplace folk who are their friends and neighbors so absorb you that it is not a moving picture but life you are looking at as it was endured in those God-fearing, rugged days when a new nation was being hewn.

As Sean O'Casey is able to sketch the Irish rebellion in the life of a single family or parish in Ireland, so Honore Morrow's story of "Benefits Forgot," Clarence Brown's inspired direction and the inspired performances of a great cast have eloquently recaptured a milestone in America's progress.

• • •

"Of Human Hearts," film adaptation of the Cosmopolitan story, "Benefits Forgot," isn't dramatic in the least if you have Indians and buffaloes in your homespun films of pioneer Americans. It is the everyday courage, the unswerving goodness, the quiet industry of those long-agone men and women that provide the drama in this picture — and made possible the greatest country to live in in today's warring world.

The people we are directly concerned with are the Wilkins family of Pine Hill, O., the Rev. Wilkins, a God-fearing, ofttimes unsympathetic in his righteousness; his wife, self-sacrificing, great-hearted, forbearant, and their son, Jason, young, rebellious, selfish.

Newly arrived in the community, the Wilkinses learn that the $400 promised the preacher for his gospel-preaching had dwindled to $250, some second-hand clothing and sundry foodstuffs.

The Rev. Wilkins accepts the new terms in his customary humble spirit, his selfish wife in like manner. Their bad-natured son, Jason, however, is burning with resentment and rebellion.

As the boy grows older, he develops an interest in doctoring, aided by the instruction of the village doctor, a lovable, brilliant man, whose weakness for drink has lost him an impressive big-city practice.

• • •

The gist of the story is the boy's ingratitude. Constantly and cheerfully, his mother, now widowed, makes sacrifices, sells her most cherished small treasures, does without vital necessities that her son may pursue his medical training.

There comes the time when, serving the Union army brilliantly as a surgeon, he is summoned to Washington by President Lincoln, admonished by him for neglecting to write his mother and ordered, under penalty of court-martial, to send her a weekly letter.

John Carradine's Lincoln and James Stewart's young doctor are superb portrayals and they make of this unusual conference a most humanly interesting scene.

Walter Huston, as the uncompromising Rev. Ethan Wilkins, gives one of the finest performances of his career, Beulah Bondi, as his wife, has the tenderness and strength that make her performance shine with sincerity.

Charles Coburn's tipsy village doctor, his first film role, is another fine performance and has brought him a flock of screen offers.

Marvelous thumbnail sketches of village characters are provided by Guy Kibbee, as the skinflint storekeeper; Gene Reynolds, who plays Jason as a small boy; Leatrice Joy Gilbert, the late John Gilbert's daughter who wins her acting spurs in her initial film assignment as Jason's youthful sweetheart; Robert McWade as Dr. Lumpus, and all the others in this touching drama.

Partnered with "Of Human Hearts" is "Swing Your Lady," hilarious farce starring Louise Fazenda as a she-wrestler and featuring Humphrey Bogart, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins and Nat Pendleton.

Art Lecture at Junior League Attracts Large Audience

By BETTY ALDEN

AS A STUDIOUS prologue to the members' art exhibit which opens next week, James Sachs Plaut discussed various aspects of art and painting in a lecture at the Junior League yesterday morning . . .

Like the explanatory lectures which precede the opera season, yesterday's discussion was planned to give those interested a better understanding of what to look for in modern and classic art . . . so that they may more fully appreciate the exhibition when it opens at the League ballroom next Monday . . .

Mrs. Horace Soule, Jr.

Mrs. Plaut was one of the front row listeners as her young spouse held forth on a subject he knows so well . . . He is an assistant curator at the Museum of Fine Arts, as well as author of a number of books and articles on painting . . . formerly he was at the Fine Arts Museum at Harvard where he gained a great deal of his knowledge about modern and classic art . . . Mrs. Plaut accented her blondeness with a black costume, trimmed with Persian lamb, and bands of the fur on her high crowned turban . . .

Mrs. Louis McClennen, who has an enviable gift for portrait painting, was one of the interested listeners . . . her costume represented two of the most vivid colors on an artist's palette, bright blue and flame color . . . the blue dress was stitched with white and her brown antelope hat, which matched her fur coat, was banded with wide flame-color ribbon . . . Arkie de Rosset Lloyd was another interested listener . . . her black costume topped by a shirred black toque . . .

Mrs. Sam Bartow looked like the first spring bluebird in a tweed suit of pale blue . . . Mrs. Horace Soule, Jr., and Mrs. Marc Peter, Jr., parted after the lecture with a cheery "See you this evening" . . . There's never a dull moment at the League . . .

Margaret Spencer MacMillan browsed around in the League's lending library while other members dashed in and out the wide front entrance headed for one activity or another . . . The jury for the art exhibit was in session and busy assistants were carrying in everything from pencil sketches to needlepoint chairs for the jurors' inspection . . .

Addresses Cushman Club Members

POLLY EHRLICH and Rachel Warner, the League's youngest ex-president, warmly greeted Dorothy Lawrence MacKenzie, who dropped in to see some of her old friends . . . She is also on the roster of ex-presidents of the League . . . After her marriage a few years ago she moved to Philadelphia and seldom gets back to Boston . . . She is the daughter of James Lawrence of Milton . . .

Both the Junior League activities and the lecture at the Charlotte Cushman Club next door, contributed to the traffic jam at the Public Garden end of Marlborough street around noon . . . The cars of the Cushman clubbers stayed in their parking places longer than expected as the morning lecture-goers were loath to let Dorothy Speare conclude her talk about movie stars, authors, and her experiences in Hollywood . . . She talked in a most charming manner and dwelt on some of the difficulty which young authors encounter in contacting the movie moguls to interest them in stories . . . In spite of the fame she won with her first novel, "Dancers in the Dark," Miss Speare was hard put to it to get a producer interested in "One Night of Love," which, you remember, eventually became a movie and thrilled theater-goers with its romantic theme . . .

Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French, president of the club, and Mrs. A. Neil Osgood took tickets at the door and both seemed to favor green for their early morning costumes . . . Mrs. French's was a novelty woolen made into a fascinating dress with a black skirt and black zipper forming a striking contrast on the green bodice . . . Mrs. Daniel de Menocal committed a serious faux pas, at least in the eyes of her little dachshund . . . for she left him tied to the sofa in the lower hall during the lecture, which he occasionally interrupted with a tragic moan . . . Mrs. William A. Gaston and Mrs. Francis W. Bird were others in the audience which packed the library and reception hall on the club's second floor . . .

Lecture to Benefit Scholarship Fund

ADMIRAL AND MRS. RICHARD E. BYRD and Commodore Harry B. Walker of the Eastern Point Yacht Club, and Mrs. Walker, are among the sea loving socialites attending the lecture this evening in John Hancock Hall, which Warwick Thompkins is giving for the benefit of the Brimmer School scholarship fund . . .

Capt. Thompkins, owner and skipper of the schooner Wanderbird, will show his new movies of a trip around Cape Horn a year ago . . . During his stay here, which is his first visit since the spring of 1936, he is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew N. Winslow of Chestnut street . . . though over the week-end he will be the guest of John Hays Hammond at the latter's famous castle on the North Shore . . .

Most anxiously awaiting this evening's showing of the movies are a number of Bostonians who have sailed on the Wanderbird, including Barthold Schlesinger, Wells Morss, Tony Sargent and Dick McMullin . . . Mrs. Stewart Todd will attend with her son, Giles, who sailed around the Horn on a grain ship a few years back . . .

Still others in the audience will be Mr. and Mrs. John Yerxa, Mrs. W. Eliot Pratt, who is giving a dinner party before hand for Mrs. Everett Morss; Professor Charles H. Taylor of the history department at Harvard, who is also president of the board of directors of Brimmer; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hale, Mr. and Mrs. James Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. Stearns Poor, Judge and Mrs. Frank Deland, Mr. and Mrs. Dana Estes, Mrs. John Bartol, Mrs. Richard Bowditch, Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Clifford and Miss Elizabeth de Blois, who will be hostess to a group of friends at dinner before the lecture . . .

* * *

The Charles F. Hoveys of Beaver place are in New York, where Mr. Hovey acted as an usher at the fashionable Mayfair wedding yesterday at which Ella D. Milbank became the bride of William Ward Foshay . . .

* * *

It seems as if spring and summer must be just around the corner when we hear that Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Cutler of Arlington street are already making arrangements to open their Newport villa so as to get an early start on the season.

Annual Sale to Benefit Blind Workers of State

There is little doubt that the number 13 will belie the old superstition and will prove lucky to the blind workers of Massachusetts.

Last year the Women's Civic Federation held a large and very successful sale of the work from the Blind Handicraft Shop, at 73 Newbury street, and by the way things look now, this year's sale, which will be held at the Handicraft Shop from March 28 to April 9, inclusive, will be even more successful and profitable. As the proceeds are returned direct to the blind artisans who made the articles in the sale, the sale days will prove to be their thirteen lucky days.

Yesterday afternoon, a committee meeting was held at the Blind Handicraft Shop to arrange the final details with the many charitable and church organizations which will assist with the sale.

In the absence of Mrs. H. Parker Whittington, director of the sale, who could not attend because of illness, Mrs. John Gorham Palfrey, co-director, presided. Mrs. Robert M. Prouty of Hingham, chairman of the committee, assisted in deciding on the schedule of tables.

Each day of the sale one of the several tables is allotted to workers from such organizations as the Catholic Daughters of America, the Arlington Street Church, the ladies aid committees of hospitals, women's clubs, benevolent societies, and representative groups from churches of all denominations and faiths. A chairman is appointed for each table. She invites ten friends to assist her.

On the committee for this sale are Mrs. Barrett Wendell, honsray chairman; Mrs. Prouty, chairman; Mrs. William H. Lord, and Mrs. Charles E. Wyzanski, vice-chairmen; Mrs. William W. Taft, treasurer; Mrs. William S. Butler, Mrs. Clifford F. Smith, Mrs. Frederic Mattheis, Mrs. Eugene E. O'Donnell, Mrs. Harris C. Burns, Patricia Gavin, Mary Louise Spaulding, Mrs. John D. Adams, Mrs. Charles R. C. Borden and Mrs. John V. Ballard.

Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mrs. Charles Hunley, wife of the governor, and William H. McCarthy, director of the Massachusetts Division of the Blind will officiate at the opening of the sale at ten o'clock, Monday morning, March 28.

B. C. Group Will Dance Tonight

Boston College boasts of at least one co-ed club. It's composed of students of the intown college on Newbury street, who are making their debut at a dance tonight the Copley-Plaza.

With the music being supplied by a swing orchestra, everyone is looking forward to the party as a final wind-up of the college's 75th anniversary week.

Joseph Repucci is chairman of the get-together. His supporters include Homer Quigley, Anna Murphy, Joseph Bergin, John McGovern, Florence Coyne, Paul Kiley, Sol Musci and Fred Garth.

Cory-Thayer Bridal

Worcester Girl In Ceremony

Constance Thayer, daughter of Mrs. Charles M. Thayer of Worcester, is having an all white ceremony for her wedding to David Cleveland Cory of Englewood, N. J., this afternoon.

The Rev. Richard G. Preston is performing the ceremony in All Saints' Church in Worcester, which has been decorated with white flowers.

GOWN OF WHITE SATIN

Her gown is of white satin, made on princess lines, with a long tulle veil. Jean Kinsley, of Worcester, the maid of honor, and the four bridesmaids, Lucy Dominick of Greenwich, Ct.; Maria Gaillard of New York, Vera Bullock of Worcester and Mrs. Louis Long, Jr., of Cambridge, are all wearing white chiffon.

Robert H. Cory, Jr., is acting as best man for his brother, and among the ushers are Hoyt C. Peace of New Britain, Ct.; Stephen Whitney of New Haven, Ct.; Kenneth T. Fawsett of New York, Philip Thayer, brother of the bride, and Cleveland Cady Cory, brother of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony a small reception is being held at Mrs. Thayer's Cedar street home. Mrs. Thayer, who receives with her daughter and new son-in-law, is wearing a gown of blue crepe. Mrs. Cory, who will also assist the newly married couple in receiving, is wearing brown crepe.

SMITH GRADUATE

The bride prepared for college at Milton Academy and graduated from Smith with the class of 1934. She is a member of Boston's exclusive Chilton Club and of the Worcester Junior League. Mr. Cory graduated from Yale, class of 1934, and is a member of the Yale Club of New York, and the Knickerbocker Country Club. Mr. Cory and his bride plan to return from their honeymoon trip around the first of April and make their home in Englewood, N. J.

Models to Parade

Fete Sponsored By Guild

Styles for spring and summer will strut along the runway at the Guild of the Infant Saviour fashion show and bridge Tuesday afternoon at the Copley-Plaza.

With everyone becoming clothes-conscious at this season, Mrs Joseph Ahern, is anticipating a jammed ballroom at the affair in aid of the charity fund.

Capable co-chairmen of the party are Mrs. James P. O'Hara and Mrs. Harry P. Cahill, while Mrs. Daniel Kelly and Mrs. Thomas Carens are doing fine work as assistants.

Selection of prizes has been entrusted to Mrs. Bernard Burke, whose aides include Mrs. T. Francis Mullen and Mrs. Thomas Burke. Margaret Waters is busy directing a group packing dainty packages of candy. Among them are Mrs. Edward F. Linnehan, Mrs. Frank Taft and Mrs. Augustus Leahy.

Chairmen of the usher committee are Mrs. James J. Regan and Mrs. James F. Gaffney, who have appointed many members of the executive boards as their assistants. Among them are Mrs. John H. Casey, Mrs. Andrew Guthrie, Mrs. Edward Cunningham, Mrs. Mark Gallagher, Mrs. Michael Stapleton, Mrs. Francis J. Monahan and Mrs. William Farrell and Mrs. Thomas P. Feeny.

Playing patronesses for the party are Mrs. Bernard Burke, Mrs. Thomas Cargas, Mrs. Frederick Quinn, Mrs. George O'Brien.

CHAPTER 46

BIG GUS MORNICK fired a shade of a second later than his murder-bent henchman—and missed. The racket boss stumbled, almost fell. Greefy once more pulled the trigger. There was a futile click of steel against steel. Coolly, Big Gus shot again, the bullet hitting Greefy in the chest. Then a powerful hand knocked the gun away.

"That will be all, Mornick," said Jerry standing behind the pallid Vince.

Big Gus grinned painfully.

"You wasn't quick enough Councilman," he said. "I got him." He put a palsy palm to his shoulder, brought it away covered with blood. His face assumed an expression of babyish wonder. "Can you figure that guy blastin' me after all I done for him?"

But Greefy wasn't dead yet. He lay slumped in a heap beside the desk, breathing loudly, his eyes fixed on Big Gus in undying malevolence.

The door to the smoke-filled room crashed open. Long-barreled police guns covered the four men.

"Sufferng saints!" complained the deep voice of Barney Kelly. "Who tipped you off, O'Donovan?"

Uniforms filled the room.

"This man's dying," said a crisp voice of authority.

The speaker ripped the blue glasses from Greefy's blood-drained face. "Koopman, of course! Put him on that table, men. Let's have a stenographer."

A patrolman thrust the wizened figure of the "Doc" into the room.

"Here's a fellow that claims to be a doctor, Captain. We found him hiding out upstairs."

Greefy pointed to the "Doc," then to Mornick. He motioned to the nearest officer.

"I'll—talk," he said, through lips bright with the blood of an internal hemorrhage. "Mickey Kelly—They—framed—Mickey—Kelly!"

"Rat!" said Big Gus, hoarsely, struggling from the chair where two policemen held him. They thrust him down again—

"Keep this man alive!" an officer ordered the "Doc." "And don't make any wrong moves—or you'll be sorry."

"Lift his head then," said the discredited physician, contemptuously. "Can't you see he's strangling to death in his own blood?"

He put one of Big Gus's elegantly bound and wholly unused books under Greefy's head.

"Now talk!" said the officer in command.

Hatred more than anything else, kept Greefy alive long enough to tell the story.

How Big Gus had framed Mickey on the murder rap—so he could force Jerry to lay off the rackets.

And then—the actual carrying out of the plot, in all its deadly detail.

How, with one of Big Gus's henchmen at the wheel, he'd trailed Mickey that fateful evening along Dorchester avenue.

How he'd jumped out of the pursuing car, pretended to be hit by Mickey's—or, rather, Del's—auto, when it stopped for the light at Adams street.

How Mickey had started for the City Hospital with him in the back of the car. How he'd tricked him into stopping opposite Ronan Park, slugged him with a pistol barrel.

"After that," said Greefy (quoting from the official stenographic report, as taken down by the police stenographer), "I shot the contents of a hypo into the left arm of Mickey Kelly. This hypo had been given me by Gus Mornick and was, he told me, loaded by a man we called The Doc. He is the man standing beside me. I have used morphine myself, and know how to handle a hypodermic needle, so I had no trouble in injecting the hypo into Kelly.

"I then placed Kelly in the back seat, and drove across town to Stony Brook Reservation, where I parked the car a little way up a side road. This was in accordance with the orders of my employer, Gus Mornick, who had taken me to that place, on the side road, three days before, and told me just what to do.

"My instructions from Mornick was to then wait for five minutes until I saw an automobile coming along with the driving beam flashing on and off. I was then to signal to this automobile with a flashlight.

"In about three minutes, such an automobile did come along, and I signaled to it. The automobile then drove into the side road. The man driving it was a man from New Jersey. He is a right guy, and I will not tell his name, as he did not know what it was all about, anyhow.

"This New Jersey man had the body of another man in the sleeping compartment of his automobile. It is that kind of an automobile. I had been told by Gus Mornick that this dead man was a radio singer and horse player named Morgan Stout, but I now know this was untrue, because Morgan Stout is alive and in this room. I now understand his true name is Vincent Barton, but he is a gapper just the same. And that is why I wanted to have him killed, because he was a witness of another job.

"This dead man was dressed in the clothes of this Morgan Stout, and I thought he was Morgan Stout, and that Gus Mornick had killed him. But I now know Mornick killed somebody else in order to double-

"With the aid of the New Jersey man, I took Mickey Kelly, who was drugged and insensible, and placed him in the New Jersey man's automobile, in the back. Then we took the dead man and put him in Mickey Kelly's car. Something had been done to his face with a knife or something, but I thought he was Stout all right. But to be sure he was dead, I shot three bullets into him, and I then took one empty shell and two loaded shells from the same gun and put them in Mickey Kelly's coat pocket. This was also on the instructions of Gus Mornick, because he wanted to make it look as if Mickey Kelly had killed this man.

"The man from New Jersey then gave me a paper-wrapped parcel that Gus Mornick had given to him, and I found in it a chemical that will make things burn very fast. It is called termite." (Note: Probably thermite, used in incendiary military bombs.) "The man from New Jersey also gave me some cans filled with a very hot gasoline that we use in torch jobs like this. Also in this parcel was a length of fuse of a kind that burns itself up, so there is not anything left. It is a special kind of fuse, not the kind they use for blasting in the quarries. It is used for torch jobs.

"I put all this in Mickey Kelly's car with the body, and drove it further in on the side road. It was at this time that I did the shooting. I covered the gun up with the coat of the dead man, so it would not make too much noise and bring the cops.

"I then poured the gasoline over the dead man, and the back of the car, and also put this termite around. Then I set fire to the fuse, and went back and got in the car with the New Jersey man, and we drove away fast.

"When we got to Pawtucket, I was afraid Mickey Kelly would come to, so I had the New Jersey man stop behind a bus station, and we put Kelly out there. Then I poured a half of pint of cheap whiskey over him that I had bought for that purpose. This was to make the cops think he was drunk, and to help frame him up for a murder rap.

"We laid him in a doorway, and I guess that is where the Pawtucket police found him.

"I then went on to Newark with the New Jersey man, and I stayed there until Gus Mornick told me to come back.

"I did all of this on the orders of Gus Mornick and he paid me $250 for doing it. I do not know who the man is that I burned up but I know he is not the gapper Morgan.

"I do not think I killed anybody on this job, because the man was dead already, but I have killed other men for Gus Mornick. One of these men was the cheap louse called Professor Cole, but he ought to of been killed. That was the job that Morgan Stout saw. I have killed other men, too, but I am too sick to tell about them.

"I also threw a knife at a man who, I now know, is Councilman Gerald O'Donovan. I did this because he hit me once when I was trying to get some information from a girl who worked in the State House. This information was for Gus Mornick. I now know the girl's name was Sheila Kelly, and that she is a sister of Mickey Kelly. But I did not know this until now, and neither did Big Gus. I did not get the information.

"When I shot Gus Mornick today, it was because I recognized Morgan Stout, or Vincent Barton as they call him, and I knew Big Gus had double-crossed me. I am sure he was going to frame me for the chair, too, and that is why he kept this Morgan Stout alive. So he could be a witness against me.

"I make this statement of my own free will, and knowing I am about to die. I have never ratted on nobody but Gus Mornick, and I would not inform on him except he crossed me.

"About the Cole job, I will say—"

Greefy died at this point, and his confession ended.

So Mickey is absolved. But what of Big Gus? Will Greefy's story be weighty enough to put the crime king behind the bars or in the electric chair? And how did Barney Kelly appear on the scene with his police friends so opportunely? This and more will be told in tomorrow's installment of this engrossing serial, appearing in the Boston Evening American.

When Gangster, Racketeer Fall Out

Greefy Koopman, dying on the floor; Gus Mornick gravely wounded by Greefy's bullet; Vince Barton, pallid with fright kneeling beside the gunman—this sight met the eyes of Jerry O'Donovan as he burst into the crime-castle of the rackets boss just after the arch-criminal and his satellite had turned their guns upon each other in battle over double-cross.

Sheila Model At Hovey's Tomorrow

Sheila Kelly, the fascinating heroine of the "Cabots and the Kellys," who is Ruth Weidman in real life, will model spring clothes in a fashion show at the Joan and Shane Junior Shop of Hovey's store tomorrow, from noon till 5 p. m.

Sheila was a model before she was chosen to become the personification of the lovely leading lady of the Boston Evening American serial.

What Has Gone Before in This Serial

GENUINE, decent, loyely. That's Sheila Kelly, of South Boston, heroine of this novel, as she trips down the steps of the State House into a maelstrom of adventure and romance.

Typical of the best in Boston is the Kelly family—former Sgt. Bernard F. Kelly, police stroke veteran; his devoted wife, Emma; their children, Sheila, Patricia, Michael, Delphine (Patsy, Mickey, and Del).

Sheila is a temporary State House employe when the story opens. So far, the only man to stir her heart has been Gerald (Jerry) O'Donovan, of Roxbury, former B. C. football star, and rising figure in Boston politics.

Accident brings her into contact with Bradford Cabot Talton, Beacon street, Harvard, and Social Register. Though she does not encourage his attentions, Jerry grows jealous, and she drops the Harvard youth.

But chance brings them together again, and Sheila finds herself swayed by Brad's charm—even though she rejects his proposal of marriage.

Like a gayer echo of Sheila's love complications, is the romance of her 17-year-old sister, Patsy, and Whit Prentice, Brad's Harvard room-mate. Too young to wed without parental approval, and unlikely to get that, the pair elope to Nashua, N. H. But Patsy postpones her honeymoon to go to Ireland with her parents on a long-planned trip, financed by Del.

A sinister element enters the affairs of the Kelly family when Big Gus Mornick, Boston racket boss, seeks to obtain possession of a sealed police report on racketeering, which Sheila has typed.

His fury turns against Jerry O'Donovan when Jerry, campaigning successfully for city council, promises to clean up the rackets—number pool, bookmaking, and so on.

Meanwhile, Vince Barton, of Jamaica Plain, Delphine's crooning husband, blunders into Mornick's net by being among the innocent bystanders when Greefy Koopman, a Mornick gunman, commits a racket murder.

Other early developments of the story are familiar to readers. Recent chapters are concerned with the development of Mornick's plot to entrap Mickey.

Sure that Jerry's devotion to Sheila will lead him to make any sacrifice, the racket boss "frames" Mickey on a murder rap. Sheila, he reasons, will induce Jerry to drop his anti-racket campaign to save Mickey from the chair.

Greefy wants to use Vince as the murder victim, but Big Gus disagrees. He has a soft spot for crooners, and, besides, he can hold Vince as a threat over Greefy. So he instructs the "Doc," a discredited ex-physician, to find a lunatic who resembles Vince. The "Doc" finds one. Gus hates Vince out.

Greefy pretends to be hit by Del's car, which Mickey is driving, and begs Mickey to take him to a hospital. En route, he slugs Mickey into insensibility, dopes him, pours whiskey on his clothes. Mickey recovers consciousness in a Pawtucket policestation, held as a murder suspect. He finds Del's car has been burned, and that a man's body has been found in the ruins. Greefy thinks it is Vince's body.

Jerry sets out to free Mickey. Sheila, doubting Jerry, believes her brother innocent, cables her father to return from Ireland. Jerry finds an important clue at the murder scene. He believes that Mickey has killed Vince. Sheila meets Brad when latter insists on aiding Mickey. Jerry sees them together and is furious. He and Brad come to blows. As they fight, Greefy hurls a knife at Jerry's back, wounding him. Jerry is not seriously hurt.

Ed and Ma Kelly and Patsy return from Ireland, and Barney Kelly plunges into work of freeing Mickey. Jerry O'Donovan gets a hint as to the power behind Mickey's arrest. A radio broadcast induces Vince to call Jerry from Williamstown, where Vince is a prisoner. Jerry finds storm has disrupted air service to Albany, nearest airport. Then he meets Brad, tells of emergency. Brad flies O'Donovan to Williamstown, where they arrive in time to rescue Vince and bring him back to Boston. Vince appears at Gus Mornick's headquarters. Greefy, seeing him, believes Mornick has double-crossed him, and he and the racket boss fire together.

Star on 'Limp' In Hollywood

James Stewart Steps Into Bucket of Wine

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 25—James Stewart, movie star, was limping around today and here's why.

In the scene of "Vivacious Lady" it was Stewart's part to enter a cafe set and knock the champagne bucket down. He did so, but in his over-enthusiasm he accidentally stepped into the bucket, champagne and all.

Then he couldn't remove his foot, try as he did.

Finally a prop man got an acetylene torch and Actor Stewart was cut loose.

Now he's on the limp.

5-Suit Bridge Creates New Player's Nightmare

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (AP)—And now, to add bedlam to confusion, comes five-suit bridge.

Ely Culbertson calls it "the bridge player's nightmare." "Most people," he said "can't even hand four-suit bridge."

Howard Schenken of the Four Aces, said: "I like it."

Which gives you an idea of the impending furore.

KING, QUEEN TRY IT

The 65-card game has Europe by the ears, just as 52-card bridge has a lot of people in the United States.

The King and Queen of England recently purchased two sets, but Americans will have to wait a few weeks because the only commercialized set in this country just cleared customs.

Cards of the new suit, bearing a solid green crown on the faces, are called "Royals," the highest suit in the deck. You can play contract or auction with the new set—if you can play either with the regulation deck you have now.

Here's how

Each player receives 16 cards and the one remaining is turned face up in the middle of the table. It goes to the highest bidder who then may exchange it for any card in his or the dummy's hand.

5-SUIT BOOK EIGHT

Whereas a book now is six tricks, a five-card book is eight. Instead of bidding "one" as in auction or contract, you have to bid "nine." That's for simplicity. And the game needs all the simplicity it can get.

The new game is a product of the imagination of a Viennese scientist, Dr. Walther Marseille. Scoring is different from contract as it is played here. So are the values of each trick. So are slams.

In five-suit there are a nine slam, a grand slam and a super-slam.

State Cuts Coal Freight Rates

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 25 (AP)—A general reduction of railroad freight rates on hard coal shipped from the eastern Pennsylvania mines to other points within the state was ordered today by the public utility commission.

The slashes, effective March 25 upon ten railroads, range from seven to 87 cents a gross ton.

The order was described by the commission as a direct move to help improve conditions generally "in the hard-hit anthracite fields."

The commission made no estimate of how much money was involved in the reductions. In 1936 railroads in the area shipped 8,000,000 tons within the state.

President Dodges Party Conflicts

Backs Guffey In Pennsylvania, Faces Chandler Fire In Kentucky

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
(International News Service Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—President Roosevelt some time ago summed up his feeling about the perennial conflict between capital and labor in one phrase: "A plague on both your houses."

He is approaching the same static of mind concerning the warring elements in the Democratic party who have been calling at the White House and depositing their factional quarrels.

Pennsylvania, Kentucky, New York, Illinois, Indiana, California—have been seeking presidential guidance and conciliation in their intra-party squabbles.

For the most part Roosevelt is remaining aloof. He invested himself into the tangled Pennsylvania situation yesterday only to the extent of succeeding in the harassed Keystone leaders that Senator Joe Guffey be left in the Senate.

LEWIS HOLDS WHIP

As to the governorship, he proffered no suggestions.

In the background of the Pennsylvania situation, stands John L. Lewis. He is insisting that the gubernatorial nomination go to Lieutenant Governor Thomas Kennedy, treasurer of the United Mine Workers an important cog in the CIO machine.

Organized labor claims to have an electorate of a million votes in Pennsylvania and of that number John L. Lewis and he CIO unions can muster about 500. The rest are A. F. of L.

Guffey and his colleagues in Pennsylvania, Governor George H. Earle, who has already announced for the Senate, keenly realize the need of Lewis' support. But they back at the prospect of the CIO being installed in the State House at Harrisburg.

CHANDLER REBELS

With some 25,000 state jobs to dispense they fear that the CIO would swallow the state organization. But they fear, too, that to antagonize Lewis may be to drive him to support of Gifford Pinchot veteran Republican-Progressive who has announced for the governorship.

The Kentucky senatorial situation presents another headache to the White House. There Governor A. B. (Happy) Chandler announced his candidacy in opposition to Senator Alben W. Barkley, who was hand picked by Roosevelt for the majority leadership. The White House is committed to Barkley a fact of which Governor Chandler is well aware, as evidenced by his warning to Roosevelt to keep hands off.

The President recently made an ineffectual effort to persuade Governor Chandler not to oppose Barkley. He did not impress the governor who went back to Kentucky and set out for Barkley's scalp.

Repeated efforts have been made to draw the President into Democratic fights in other states especially California and Illinois but thus far unsuccessfully. Mr. Roosevelt is proving a wary bird in that respect.

Democrats Agree On Pa. Candidates

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 25 (INS)—Pennsylvania's Democratic leaders agreed today upon a primary slate after an all-night conference which adhered to the suggestion of President Roosevelt that U. S. Senator Joseph F. Guffey forget his gubernatorial aspirations and remain in the Senate.

Governor George H. Earle will head the slate as candidate for the U. S. Senate seat now held by James J. Davis, Republican.

For governor, the Democrats finally agreed on a compromise Charles Alvin Jones a wealthy Pittsburgh lawyer who is friendly with both the CIO and AFL factions.

Dr. Leo Moundy of Wilkes-Barre, for lieutenant governor and Thomas A. Logue of Philadelphia for re-election as state secretary of internal affairs rounded out the ticket.

But the slate makers faced more difficulties today as Joan L. Lewis the CIO generalissimo, waited to announce the candidacy of Lieutenant Governor Thomas A. Kennedy for the nomination for governor. It was believed Kennedy's announcement was being delayed until the state committee completed the formality of endorsing the slate picked by party leaders later in the day.

3 Jurors Picked For Ryan Trial

NEW YORK, Feb 25 (INS) In the bedroom where Patrolman Michael J. Ryan fell mortally wounded with three bullets in him his widow and alleged slayer Mrs. Patricia Ryan 20 w.l re-enact the death scene.

Today counsel perfected plans for the widow's defense.

Only three jurors were in the box after three days due to extraordinary care which state and defense exercised.

The state wanted jurors who would have no objection to sending a woman to the chair. The defense sought jurors who would believe that a woman may be driven temporarily insane by improper demands made on her by her husband.

Constantly shaken with dry sobs Mrs. Ryan hung her head as her counsel framed his frank questions to women which indicated a sordid story to come from her lips.

Ditchdigger In Opera Role

Youth Has Big Chance In Traviata Tonight

NEW YORK Feb 25 (AP)—A ditchdigger will make his debut in opera tonight.

Up from the muck of a Works Progress Administration project in Flushing, 23-year-old Gerano Cardinale will sing the leading role of Alfredo in Verdi's "La Traviata" at the Hippodrome.

Wearing new $3 shoes and a borrowed tuxedo with 11 cents in the right-hand pants pocket, he rehearsed his role last night, fidgeting in excitement between songs.

His audience tonight is expected to include Mayor LaGuardia and, of course, Jerry's mother and the eight other children in the family.

For eight years Jerry has shined shoes, delivered ice, peddled fruit, collected junk, sung in burlesque and dug ditches to pay the rent while he took singing lessons. Now he has his chance.

Gen. Sheridan's Widow Dies

WASHINGTON Feb 25 (INS)—Mrs. Philip H. Sheridan, 88, widow of the Union's famed general of the Civil War, lay dead today at her home not far from where stands the equestrian statue of her husband in Sheridan Circle. She had been in ill health many years.

After the great Chicago fire Mrs. Sheridan and the General moved here, where she became one of the most popular of Washington's society matrons. The General died 50 years ago. She was the sister of the widow of the famous Civil War general.

She was only 13 when General Sheridan led his troops in the famous Civil War charge at Winchester, Va., routing the confederates and preventing them from marching on to the capital.

Her marriage to Sheridan in 1870, when her husband was then a lieutenant-general, was a brilliant affair. She was considered one of Washington's most beautiful women of her time.

She engaged in a controversy with President Cleveland when the latter refused her request to approve the appointment of her son Philip H. Sheridan, Jr., to West Point. President McKinley, however, who succeeded Cleveland, named the youth.

Roosevelt Sale Of Press Talk Notes Rapped

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (INS)—President Roosevelt's sale of the records of the White House press conferences for publication, criticized today on the floor of the House of Representatives by Rep Howwman (R) of Michigan.

Representative Hoffman humorously suggested an investigation by the Senate. He said:

"The Senate is always investigating—why not have an investigation to determine how much the occupancy of the White House is worth?"

Referring to Roosevelt's TVA and other "yardsticks," Hoffman added:

"I'd like to know how much three would be worth if the writer were not in the White House. If we find out then we'll have a 'yardstick' on the value of White House advertising."

SCORES PRESIDENT

"Born to a silk shirt, with the proverbial gold spoon in his mouth, the President can give cards—spades big and little easies—to the economic royalists, and still beat them to the jack pot.

"At taking a profit, whether earned or not, the President is an expert; nor has he any scruples as to the means used to increase that profit. He is something of a monopolist, who practices the methods of a monopolist to further his profit-taking job. Nor is he above depriving a hard working journalist or columnist of a job."

Hoffman said that the President imposes "a degree of secrecy upon newspaper men at his press conferences. Now, he said the President is selling these records.

"So, using his presidential offices as his advertising agency —and this without cost to him personally—the President retains a monopoly, prevents those who are engaged in the business of reporting and writing from using their information, and sells his manuscript to a syndicate, for, it is said, something like $100,000."

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1938 13

GIRL About TOWN

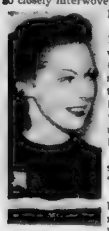
By ANN MARSTERS

BOOK REVIEW:—We found great delight in reading the biography, by Katharine Anthony, of Louisa May Alcott. It is so closely interwoven with familiar Boston scenes, for so much of Louisa's life was spent here.



Ann Marsters

In her childhood the Boston Common was her playground and "she could drive hes hoop without stopping all the way around the Common." "Furthermore," Miss Anthony says, "once she fell into the Frog Pond on the Common and might have been drowned but for the prompt action of a colored boy, who pulled her out. No one ever knew the name of the colored boy, but he became a legendary hero in the family."

It was in a rooming house in Chauncy street that she later wrote a great part of "Little Women."

Her childhood in Boston was interrupted by several years in Concord. And when she returned to live on Beacon Hill she wrote in her journal:

"Boston, May, 1850 . . . Since coming to the city I don't seem to have thought much, for the bustle and dirt and change send all lovely images and restful feelings away."

Boston Unique To This Day, She Finds

But Katharine Anthony herself writes most flatteringly of our city, saying:

"In the early history of the United States, Boston was 25 or 30 years ahead of the rest of the country in development. It had more culture than the average American city in the middle of the nineteenth century.

"To this day it presents an atmosphere of literacy wholly unique, as, for instance, even the roadside signs for motorists bear witness, implying, as they do, that only well-educated people drive automobiles in and around Boston . . . The refinement of the Pilgrims had a primitive hold that always persists."

Louisa Alcott dwelt in a number of Boston residences. For a time she resided at the Bellevue Hotel, then there was "a house in Pinckney street, an apartment in Boylston street and a house in Louisburg square. And Louisburg square, on the slope of Beacon Hill, was the symbol of all that she aspired to give to her family

There was a time the thought of you would bring
The vision of a vibrant, bubbling spring,
Or comet slashing out against the sky
In stark white heat; but now it seems that I
Remember you and see the quiet green
Of rolling lands, a cloistered pool's serene
Reflection of an over-hanging tree,
Or moonlight on a quiet summer sea.

THIS Is LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I should be inclined to smile a bit pityingly at the news that London has decided Walt Disney's cartoon comedy from Grimm's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" was to be restricted to young people at least sixteen, because the picture is supposed to frighten children, did I do not remember vividly an occurrence at a matinee performance of "Snow White" at the Winthrop Ames Theater in New York many years ago.

Robert E. Rogers

True, other English communities have refused to follow London's lead, assuming their children are quite capable of enjoying Disney's film. But the fact remains that the same story, with human actors, was once capable of scaring a small child nearly out of her wits. I don't believe that could happen now, however, particularly since the Walt Disney picture is so comical and so beautiful and so carefully handled.

The little girl who got down under her seat and refused to be quieted, which occurred (if I remember rightly) at the point when the Wicked Queen, disguised as a gypsy, was about to give Snow White the poisoned apple, was probably more scared at the implications of what might happen than anything really alarming on the stage.

Today's Infants Of Sterner Mold

I suspect that our present day infants are made of sterner stuff. This, you must remember, was in the earliest days of movies and long before the radio. Nowadays, children are accustomed to beholding on the screen, violent and melodramatic actions which they would have been carefully denied back in the days of the ten-twenty-thirt melodramas.

A few years later, though, they were following, breathlessly, "The Perils of Pauline" and the "Exploits of Elaine" and becoming familiar with gangsters and bandits in action, the clutching hand, Chinese opium jonts, sinking ships, railroad wrecks and all that sort of thing.

And today there is so much protest over childrens bedtime stories over the radio, tales of ghosts and monsters and horrors, that parents are asking the government (since it controls the radio) to do something about it although, as a sane editorial writer suggests, it is very easy to turn the dial lest the children have bad dreams.

Comparison Favors Disney Idyll

In comparison with some of these horrors Walt Disney's idyll, taken from one of the best known and best beloved of the Brothers Grimm's stories, seems harmless indeed. It seems incredible that even the youngest child should be alarmed, though there is undoubtedly an age below which little persons ought not to be allowed to go to theater or movies, or, indeed, be not habitually allowed to listen to radio stories.)

I cannot conceive, even, of a small child mistaking Disney's pictured fairy tale for reality, especially that kind of reality which they are accustomed to in current films and radio programs, with their shots, groans and howls, battle, murder, and sudden death, all very realistic.

It is true that the atmosphere of Grimm's wonder stories is more realistic, more founded on ancient fears, than, for instance, the pleasantly humorous and wistful tales of Hans Anderson. But there is an element in all ancient folk tales which recalls the fact that the physical world used to be a more fearsome place than it is now and that Walt Disney was wise in not trying to eliminate that element completely.

Wonder, Magic Been Retained

But he also retained successfully the atmosphere of the far-away and long-ago, the sense of wonder of mystery and magic which are an indispensable part of the earliest memories of the race.

Better, perhaps, that children learn the presence of evil abroad in the world through the medium of fairy tales, than to become accustomed (say hardened) to the idea of evil as a matter of course (children bombed and mangled and cities helpless under plane raids) in the world, in which they live.

Too much matter of fact repetition of that sort of thing is, I suspect, far more horrible than anything in Snow White.

Aldermen Call Operators of 5 Beano Games

Board at Somerville Decides on Probe After Report

As a result of their alleged refusal to furnish information to an investigative group of aldermen, operators of five Somerville "penny beano" games will be called before the Somerville board of aldermen a week from tomorrow.

Decision to bring about an open investigation of conditions attending the games was reached after the reading of a report by Aldermen James M. Redmond, who, with Aldermen Edward F. Moynihan and Allen Roy Kingston, was appointed to probe operation of the five organizations.

Redmond charged that he was unable to gain complete information at any of the five places.

INCOME OF $714

The places he visited, Redmond said, were run under the auspices of the Teele Square Italian Political Club on Broadway, East Somerville; the Ladies Auxiliary Dilboy Post, V. F. W., at Union square; the Magoun Square Association at Magoun square; the New Post, V. F. W., on Elm street Davis square, and the Disabled American Veterans, Davis square.

The Teele square game, Redmond stated was managed by Charles Palladino, and showed an income of $714.10 for the week ending February 12, with $700.75 given out in prizes and operating expenses.

LARGE RECEIPTS PUZZLE

"This commission can't understand the large receipts of these club games and the small amounts given to charity," the report read.

At one establishment, Redmond said, the management reported $85 taken in one night, when he figured the intake must have been at least $720. He declared some twelve men he outsides not connected with the clubs whose names they used.

Money which should go for food, he said, is spent at the beano games and welfare recipients get rid of their checks there.

Camera!

Movie Stars Will Pose for Him

Look pretty now—that's fine! Here's William Beal, winner of recent Cecil DeMille mapshot contest, taking a last camera shot at fellow worker in Jordan Marsh store before he departs for Hollywood on free trip awarded him as first prize in the competition. Ruth Anderson is the smiling subject of this parting photo. Beal leaves tonight and while in Hollywood he will personally film an everlasting record of his visit among the movie stars. The contest was conducted by the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser in conjunction with the Metropolitan Theater.

Winner of DeMille Contest To Record His Trip in Films

Amateur Camera Fan Leaves Tonight on Hollywood Visit

"California, Here I Come!"

That's the song William H. Beal will sing when he steps aboard the 6 35 train tonight at South Station.

"Bill" Beal, 27, of Henry street, Revere, was winner of first prize, a trip to Hollywood at expenses paid—in the recent contest conducted by Cecil B. DeMille amateur camera contest.

Hollywood, San Francisco and the Canyon and Chicago will be points of-call on Beal's 7000-mile trip from coast to coast.

Beal, employed at Jordan Marsh Company, has been an amateur camera fan since he was 17.

Judges who found his photo of the famous Paramount producer the best of hundreds submitted from all over New England included George Woodruff, New England manager for International News Photos, William Erbh, New England divisional manager for Paramount Pictures, and Franklin L. Jordan, noted photographer and writer.

His Hollywood address will be the famous Roosevelt Hotel where private cars will pick him up mornings to take him on tours of the interesting spots.

On Paramount lot he will meet glamorous Carole Lombard, Claudette Colbert and Martha Raye among other film luminaries.

A dozen rolls of color film, plus regular films and two cameras are in Bill's luggage so he can snap a lasting record of his trip to the movie capital.

Manager Urged For 'Any City But Boston'

Legislative Report Cites Plan's Success; Mayor 'Figurehead'

Adoption of the city manager form of government in any city in the state except Boston was recommended by a special legislative committee headed by Senator [illegible] on Taxation and Public Expenditures.

Senator Lovett [illegible] city manager charter in Boston, under the plan opposed Mayor [illegible] was [illegible] recommended [illegible] Boston.

During [illegible] period where the city manager plan was tried and found successful, the commission declared.

"Massachusetts cities should have the opportunity of keeping pace with advanced forms of government which have proved effective in other parts of the country."

REPORT EXPLAINS PLAN

Explaining the city manager plan of government in a report accompanying the proposed legislation, the commission stated:

"It is a governmental method by which the people elect a rule-making and policy determining body, usually known as the Council, which in turn chooses a business manager who is solely responsible for carrying out the administration functions of the government.

"Usually a trained and experienced person, the manager may be hired and dismissed on short notice.

"The mayor is elected by and from the council and is the official and ceremonial head of the city.

"The council can deal with the staff and operating departments only through the manager. This means that the council may decide what is to be done and it is the responsibility of the manager to decide how it shall be done."

COUNCIL SELECTS MAYOR

The council, according to the commission's report, "shall select from its own membership one member to be designated as mayor."

Under the charter for this plan, the members of the council would be elected by the [illegible] voters. A council of seven members, depending on the size of the city, is provided for in the charter.

The city manager plan, the report stated, is valid in any city or town in the state now or hereafter adopted for other charters by referendum vote passed prior to or after the [illegible] of a specific [illegible] per cent of the registered voters.

New Armenian Paper for City

Under the editorship of John Sanjean, lecturer, writer and authority on immigration matters, Boston soon will have its first English language Armenian newspaper.

The new paper according to San Jean is being planned particularly in the interests of younger Armenians in this area and the tentative name is "The Voice of Armenians."

Prospective staff members and contributors are being interviewed at Sanjean offices, 40 Court street, and the first publication date is expected to be announced shortly.

The newspaper, Sanjean declared today, will be "free from influence of political organizations of Armenians whose interests are abroad."

Pigs Give Police Merry Chase in East Boston

Pigs is pigs and a lot of trouble, too, as three Boston policemen discovered today when two 600-pound porkers dropped from a truck in East Boston and ran wild.

"Hey," said the police radio announcer, "two pigs just got loose from a truck at Meridian and White streets. Go get 'em, boys!"

So Patrolmen Thomas Clegg, Bart Murphy and James Aiken unbuttoned their holsters and rushed to the scene.

There they found one of the hogs playing tag with trucks and autos and generally snarling up traffic.

The pig-catching officers approached slowly.

"Here, piggy, piggy," pleaded Patrolman Clegg.

The pig paid no attention and kept right on scaring motorists. Gathering courage, Patrolman Galvin executed a flying tackle. He landed in a mud puddle, while the pig grunted disdainfully and made for an enticing taxicab.

Right in his path was Patrolman Clegg, who, as the 600-pounds of rushing pork bore down on him, spread his legs and braced himself for the onslaught.

The pig dashed through Clegg's legs. Clegg sat down—suddenly.

Finally, the three embattled policemen cornered the annoying porker in an alley, where all three leaped upon it and managed to hog tie the animal, literally.

The other porker, meanwhile, made the mistake of wandering onto the open stretches of the Meridian street bridge, where Bridgetender William Kelliher effected its capture by closing both gates.

Whereupon the two hogs were returned to their owner, Paul Gaffney of Winthrop.

Man Hangs Self In Jamaica Plain

Despondent over the loss of his job several weeks ago, according to police, Charles O'Rourke, 46, of Woodlawn street, Jamaica Plain, was found dead by hanging in the kitchen of his home today.

O'Rourke, a former Boston Elevated operator, was discovered by his wife, Katherine.

Lake Quinsigamond Purchase Studied

The legislative committee on public health today considered a recommendation for the purchase and control of Lake Quinsigamond by the State at a cost of $65,000.

The special recess commission appointed to study the project declared the lake constitutes a serious health menace because its low water level prevents oil and scum from flowing off.

Truck Driver's Drawings Put on Display Here

Sketches in Charcoal Draw Favorable Comment

Art by a truck driver, 11 drawings in charcoal by Rae Catanzano, 21, of Dell street, Somerville, today attracted widespread interest and favorable comment when it was displayed in the Somerville Public Library.

The pieces on display in the library exhibit are but a few of the scores of drawings and oil paintings which young Catanzano has created at his home by night, after hard days' work behind the wheel of a truck.

His favorite portraits are those of his "inspiration," a young lady friend, Rena Bergnani of Braintow avenue, Somerville.

Many of the talented youth's works adorn walls of his Dell street home, where he lives with his father, Frank Catanzano, and four brothers and sisters.

In places where the visitor would least expect to see them he has painted antic mural decorations based on Walt Disney characters, including the popular seven dwarfs of "Snow White."

A graduate of Somerville High School, Rae later won a scholarship for study at the Scott Carbee School of Art in Boston. He has also studied at the Massachusetts School of Art as a special student and has hopes of continuing his training.

Chief among Rae's admirers are his talented young brother, Frank Catanzano, Jr., 11, whose efforts at art and music show promise, and his 17-year-old twin sisters, Mary and Elizabeth.

Hearing Called In Jobs Probe

With a possibility that a special committee may be named to make a probe, the joint legislative rules committee today set March 14 as the date for hearing charges that the state unemployment commission is packed with non-civil service employes.

At the hearing date was set Representative Philip G. Bowker of Brookline said that he will present new evidence that civil service rules have been evaded.

It was deemed likely today that the rules committee would report favorably on an order calling for appointment of a committee of three representatives and two senators to conduct a probe.

These would be selected by Speaker of the House Horace T. Cahill and President Samuel H. Wragg of the Senate, with Gov. Hurley having no choice as to the members.

Gold IS WHERE YOU FIND IT

From the Novel by Clements Ripley

A Cosmopolitan Picture now showing at Metropolitan Theater

CHAPTER 27

"You get in there, an' you get that horse saddled an' out here in two minutes!"

Enoch's face was twisted, hard as a light-wood knot.

"Colonel, 'em hawses is your'n. 'At li'l woman's your'n. Do you want a hawse saddled fo' her, saddle it y'ownse'f!"

He spat.

"Or get one 'em share-croppers to do it—the's plenty of 'em 'll do anything."

The Colonel spoke. "Get off this place," he said measuredly.

"Figure you' pay to the end of the month and send a boy up with it. Don't let me see you again. I'll give you twelve hours to get yo' stuff and out yo' cabin an' get gone."

He sat after dinner, frowning into the fire. The strange thing was—he didn't admit it but it was there—that no friend of his had the clutch on his heart that that Enoch had.

One did, if he had known. Serena stood hesitant outside the door. Something was wrong with Kubla Khan tonight. She put her hand on the knob. She thought of Lucille and took it away again. She couldn't pet him and honey him up —not any more.

He was surly at the barns next morning. Having to handle things himself till he could find a new foreman—probably a long time after that too. It was terrible getting a new man broke in. He rounded the corner of the barn Old Enoch at his lop-eared mule as usual, in the mid t of turmeil.

The Colonel stared. He was tempted to just go back to the house and say nothing. But that wouldn't do.

"AIN'T GOIN'"

When the last team had rattled out of the corral gate, he strode over. "Did you hear me tell you to get off this place?"

Enoch bit off a chew. "I heerd But I been studyin' it some. I ain't goin'."

"You ain't—Say, you get over to yo' cabin, an' you get yo' stuff out, quick as the Lord'll let you!"

Placidly, Enoch shook his head "No, suh, Colonel, I been studyin about it, an' I don't aim to do it . . . Colonel, like you know, I rid with Marse Henry, yo' daddy, in the Mexican Wah.

"Same as I rid with you in the Big Wah. Took good keer of him, too. It were when we war ridin' home from that wah, he says to me—'Enoch,' he says, 'I just want fo' you to know this: So long as you live, you got a job an' a home with the Ferrises.'

"Them was his words, Colonel."

He paused and spat.

"An Colonel, I never did hear where Marse Henry's word failed yet."

The Colonel pursed his lips. He wheeled Gavotte and rode away. There didn't, really, seem to be much more to be said.

The rain which had started that night of the meeting was keeping on, intermittently, far beyond what spring rain had a right to

Drouth last year—too much rain this. And if he didn't get a good crop and a high price, he was going to be put to it to meet that mortgage interest.

On top of that Tolliver Parsons was keeping him harassed about this new association. There were that going to be another fiasco like that night at the schoolhouse.

They were going to keep the control of this one among the intelligent ranchers. And they were going to fight fire with fire. You had to! A lobbyist—if necessary bribes where they'd do the most good at Sacramento.

There was something about that that smelled pretty rank to Colonel Ferris. He courted a contest — even after the reversal of the decision against hydraulicking. The Legislature he didn't.

Colonel Ferris was no fool—he knew how laws were passed. And there was something about what Parsons and the rest advocated that made his skin crawl. A gentleman simply didn't buy legislation.

And still the river swirled, yellow and high-centered, between the levees. And still the young wheat was drowned—and still the push came: cash, more cash, for this, for that, everything.

Then, when the heat had shut down, and the poppies flamed on the hill-sides, and her peaches were green nubbins the size of a man's thumb, Serena came to him and wanted five hundred dollars to finance her first crop.

"I've got to have it! Look—here are the figures—"

He scanned the little black book, while she explained earnestly. So much for baskets, so much for labels, so much for payrolls.

"But—Go Lord, child!" His eye caught other figures. "What's all this mess here?"

"That's what I've spent on the orchard—what I owe you. I've kept it right since the beginning—"

His gaze rested on the total. He stiffened. Three thousand, six hundred and eight dollars!

Sums of money had never had any particular meaning for Colonel Ferris. But—four thousand dollars! (He always thought in round numbers) Four thousand dollars —gone! On this foolishness! When he wanted seven so bad-y!

"You can't have spent that much! On fifty acres? And now you want five hundred more—Fo' mo' foolishness'"

Serena's eyes were wide. "Why—why, I've got to have it I've, got to get my crop."

It was the first time in Serena's life that her father had ever hesitated at anything she wanted on account of money. She knew vaguely, that he was harassed About money—about a dozen things. BUT THIS WAS HER CROP!

She talked, a little wildly. "I'll pay it back this year—the whole thing, with a little luck. Here" She shoved the book at him. "Four, thousand bushels—"

He waved his hands at her "Never mind! Don't tell me—don't bother me! You'll get it—just don't mess me up with figures! You want it—I'll get it fo' you some way"

For two days they hardly spoke. Then the check was beside her breakfast plate. She nearly burst into tears. Then she hardened But what happened three weeks later hardened her again.

She was working night and day as they headed into summer. She had to get her crew of pickers together. She was choosing women on the place that she could teach to grade and pack when the time came. And the peaches were beginning to show a faint yellow tinge.

Then, when the peaches were swelling and it was a matter of days, a big box came to Bannockburn. It had the label of a San Francisco dressmaker

A SURPRISE

Serena had heard of the dress maker. She went into a kind of agony of delight. Kubla felt badly about the money—the things he'd said. And he was trying in his funny, clumsy, man-way to make it up to her. He was going to surprise her.

Her fingers hovered, itching, over the box. Kubla was down at the barns Swiftly, she untied it. Just a peep

Then it was lovely—lovely! A grown-up dress! She tied it up again, her heart burning She got ready to be surprised

By dinner-time the box had disappeared. She waited . . . Ah, breakfast, too . . . Well, at dinner tonight, then. She put on her prettiest little-girl dinner dress and made it a gay meal She waited.

The next day, as she rode past the village that had grown up around the school, she saw Lucille. She couldn't mistake—Lucille was wearing the dress!

The sudden, blinding anger that took hold of Serena was like nothing she had ever felt in her life. It wasn't the dress.

But this cheap little yellow-headed wench—that she should be the one to take Kubla from her—that there was absolutely nothing she could do about it—

Suddenly, her crop was upon her. A peach—each individual peach—is a temperamental as an opera star There is a moment when it is ready to come. Try to learn that moment from reading, studying, talking to some one who knows. Then try to teach 20 pickers, most of whom don't care in the least.

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Fragrance That Sets Snare of Allure

EVERY WOMAN whose claim to beauty is sure as the stars and the moon in their courses knows the subtleties of fragrance and its uses . . . there is the concentration of scent where the pulse makes subtle exhalations of it, at the throat or under the ear lobe or on the wrists. French women—and lovely Americans like Rosalind Russell—diffuse it like moonlight, thin and light, all over their bodies, for which method there's nothing quite like the perfume colognes. And today Arline Gould describes the most exciting arrival in the field!

For Walls in Living Room

WALLPAPER almost invariably adds charm to a living room. If your heart is set on one which is a little daring, one of which you are likely to tire long before you can afford to repaper, use it sparingly. Don't paper all four walls. Paper two adjacent ones and choose those two which have the least exposed space; in other words a wall where there are bookcases and a wall where there are windows or the mantel. Then paint the remaining walls in one of the colors which are present in the paper, either the ground color or some one of its accent colors which is suitable.

If you can afford to have it, and if you love it, wood paneling makes for a very charming setting. Nor do you have to be a multimillionaire to dream of such grandeur.—From Home Beautiful Magazine.

Duchess of Windsor's Perfume Now In Cologne Form

By ARLINE GOULD

THERE'S ONE thing all us gals will agree upon without a quibble in a carload . . . the Duchess of Windsor knows a thing or two about allure. That's why her bridal perfume immediately was acknowledged—a trifle enviously, by thousands of eager feminine sniffers—as definitely the Stuff.

If you didn't find out at the time what it was—or if you were too clever for words and instantly put it to good use yourself—you will be all agog about its debut as a parfum cologne.

Which means that if you've a mind to sloah it on from head to toe after your bath, it's your privilege!

Where else would it be brewed and distilled to its most golden vibrance of scent but in France?

Some fragrances are indefinite as a whisper . . . senses have to reach for them, and often you pass them unaware. These are the shy fragrances, and they'll never get you anywhere.

There are strident perfumes which clutch for the passerby . . . but they never hold the attention of your man because he's only too wary of anything that is so obvious. That kind of scent is a tactical mistake!

The beautiful Wallis' choice is supremely insinuating, with a heady sweetness that is every flower, but no one! There isn't an instant when it wafts in another's direction that it doesn't claim attention. It arrests, provokes, and lingers in the tides of memory

What more could anyone—even Wallis herself—ask for a fragrance?

You'll want it—if getting what you want is definitely one of the things you mean to accomplish in this life!

For all further information on the parfum cologne which is the exact duplicate of the Duchess of Windsor's bridal perfume, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4600, weekdays until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Good Manners

THE MAN ORDERS

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: When a gentleman and a lady are dining together, does the gentleman ask the lady her preferences and order for them both, or should each one order separately?

READER.

The man asks his guest as to her preferences, and then, he, the host, gives both orders to the waiter. He is careful to mention her order first, if the orders differ.

The well-bred woman guest does not give her order directly to the waiter, nor does she, during the meal, ask the waiter for anything . . . she makes her wants known to her host, and he directs the waiter.

In this way she makes her manner-ly bow to his host-ship.

The Trapped Trapper

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Like every other good thing in life and in bridge, "trapping" the opponents can be carried to excess.

There are times when a player's holding in the opponents' suit is so strong that he can be virtually certain that the opponents will not select that suit as trump.

East, in the hand shown below, thought he was "trapping," but found at the end that he himself had run into a set.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ◇	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	3 N T	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's jump takeout and later leap to six hearts were nothing but sheer "stabs." Admittedly South had a hard hand to bid. The extreme freakiness demanded a slam bidding device, such as asking bids, to investigate North's club holding, the danger spot. But North-South were not using artificial bids and, thus, South, feeling that he could never find out the precise honor makeup of North's diamond bid, determined to gamble.

If it happened that there were two club leaks off the hand, perhaps a fortunate opening lead would save him. That is exactly what happened.

When North opened the bidding with one diamond, East should have realized that there was virtually no chance that the opponents would end up in a diamond contract. Hence, East should have taken the opportunity to enter the bidding at the one level. His best action was to bid one spade—he could not double because there was entirely too much chance that his partner would bid hearts.

Had East bid the spade, West never would have permitted South to buy the contract, even if it were necessary to go to six spades, presumably defensively.

Listen, World!

America's Parent Problem

—By ELSIE ROBINSON—

FROM the principal's office of Dayton Heights elementary school comes an upper-cut with all the authority of a Joe Louis behind it. Another one of those oldsters' comments on the young generation. But oo-la-la—what a headache it's going to give many a Mom 'n' Dad!

"We have," says Principal James S. Lacy, "a parents' problem—not a youth problem." Just like that—and you can take it or leave it!

"During my 29 years' experience with children, I find them invariably reflecting our own qualities—for good or evil. Life's beautiful blossoms—courtesy, self-reliance, persistence, reverence of beauty and nobility—these grow in the garden of You when and if that garden is tended by adults with the same qualities. OUR CHILDREN ARE AS FINE, AS STRONG AS THE EXAMPLE WE OURSELVES SET.

"In our schools, my teachers and I refuse to be dictators. We make partners of our pupils—and a glorious adventure of LIVING. We know there is no magic in MERE LIVING . . . nor in service imitation.

"So we do not put our faith in preachments—nor the big sticks. We try to help our boys and girls shape their own fine codes . . . make their own decisions and learn to abide by them.

"Instead of doing all their thinking for them until they are grown, and then blaming or punishing them because they are weak, irresponsible, lacking in balance and consideration for others, we help our children to analyze and evaluate their acts as they go along—to face their failure or success, and determine the reasons and results.

"When they blunder we never quarrel, nag or punish. NO ERROR WAS EVER CORRECTED BY FORCE OR FEAR. We simply help them find ways to correct their mistakes and plan their programs better. So they learn, naturally, and without compulsion, that THE THOUGHTFUL LIFE IS MOST SATISFACTORY.

"The so-called 'youth problem' is actually a problem of parents and teachers facing their primary responsibility—that is, of helping children learn self-determination, self-control, and how to find their place in life.

"James Samuel Lacy,
"Principal Dayton Heights Elementary School,
"Los Angeles, Cal."

There's a letter that's BIG MEDICINE, not merely for the school room and home, but for every human anywhere

Go into the streets. Down the back alleys. Into flop houses. Into shabby, stagnant rooms where men and women sit brooding, smoking endless chain cigarettes. Into confessionals—and morgues. Through six-foot-thick, gray stone walls, where men stalk constantly, guns cocked and aimed. Into your own discouraged heart, perhaps!

Go into any place where there is hate instead of hope, despair instead of determination, cancerous anger instead of ambition—AND THAT LETTER WILL GIVE YOU BOTH CLUE AND CURE FOR THE MORTAL AGONY.

People aren't born bad . . . born weak . . . born lazy or irresolute. All people, except the hopelessly ill or idiotic, are born with the makings of strength and decency. But they should be taught how to mold and maneuver those makings.

They should be guided into a mastery of themselves and of circumstances, as James Lacy and his assistants are now guiding a fortunate few.

But, unfortunately, for every such wise teacher or parent, there are five others who are indifferent or sentimental or dictatorial.

The Coddlers . . . the Can't-be-bothered . . . the Mama-knows-best potentates . . . who either steam-roller plastic spirits into their personal pattern—or abandon them to the wolves.

They are AMERICA'S PARENT PROBLEM, infinitely more vicious and demoralizing than any ruckus ever raised by Flaming Youth.

QUEER—HOW WE LET THEM DO THINGS LIKE THAT TO CHILDREN. BUT SUPPOSE THEY TRIED IT ON A TEN-DOLLAR PUP?

No doubt most of you have spent a good many hours in your kitchen opening cans and combining ingredients until you've achieved something new and exciting to spring on the family.

Nicholas Appert is one of the unsung men of science. While his contemporary, Napoleon Bonaparte was dramatically commanding armies of invasion, Appert was quietly working out a method of food preservation so that those armies could be fed away from home

But when Nicholas Appert discovered the art of preserving foods in airtight containers he benefited the whole world—not just the French army. For from that beginning has developed the commercial canning industry of today and the practice of canning food at home.

Most canned foods can be served, as they come from the can either hot or cold but that method should only be resorted to in the gravest emergency. So let's use the can opener when we use these recipes

CRANBERRY REFRIGERATOR DESSERT

1-3 cups sweetened condensed milk
½ cup lemon juice
2-3 cup cranberry sauce
36 vanilla wafers

Blend together sweetened condensed milk and lemon juice. Add 2-3 cup cranberry sauce and mix with a silver fork. Line narrow oblong pan with wax paper and a layer of vanilla wafers. Cover with cranberry mixture. Add another layer of wafers, alternating in this way until mixture is used; finishing with layer of wafers. Let stand in refrigerator for 12 hours. To serve, turn out on small platter and carefully remove wax paper. Cut in slices and serve plain or with whipped cream. Serves 6

CRANBERRY ICE CREAM

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
1 cup cranberry sauce
¼ teaspoon lemon extract
1 cup whipping cream

Blend sweetened condensed milk, water and lemon extract thoroughly. Beat cranberry sauce into mixture and sieve. Fold whipped cream to custard-like consistency and fold into chilled mixture. Pour into freezing pan. Set in freezing unit. After mixture is about half frozen remove from refrigerator Scrape mixture from sides and bottom of pan Beat until smooth, but not quite melted. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit until firm for serving. Serves 6.

APRICOT CHARLOTTE RUSSE

1 can apricot nectar (1¼ cups)
1¼ tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup irradiated Evaporated milk
1 cup irradiated evaporated milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
About a dozen lady fingers

Soak gelatin in ¼ cup apricot nectar. Heat rest of nectar. Add sugar, salt, the 2-3 cup of milk, 1 cup apricot nectar, and the gelatin mixture. Cook over boiling water until thickened, about 15 minutes. Chill. Chill milk thoroughly and whip until stiff. Add whipped milk, vanilla and egg whites, which have been beaten stiff, to the first mixture Pour into a mold that has been lined with lady fingers, and set in a cold place to chill. Yield: 8 servings.

HOME INSTITUTE

CHARMING PERSONALITY

COMPLETELY at ease, the center of a group of charming, gaily chatting people!

That's Angela since she's learned the five easy ways to start a conversation and keep it going.

No more frozen silences for her—no more dismal dates—when one of these five can come to the rescue:

1—Personalities. As long as you're tactful, personalities are not only fun but safe. Say of someone not with your group, "There's Ted. Do you know that he's a marvel at bridge." Or "What a pretty girl. Who is she?"

2—Advice. You could get the Great Stone Face to talk if you asked him, "Should I see the new movie at the Strand?" or "Would you buy the new Blank model?" His flattered reply, you see, runs on.

3—Startling Statement. You can always start lively talk with an opinion off the usual track. "Don't you think that men are worse gossips than women?" "Tell me, does Garbo bore you as much as she does me?"

4—Personal Clues. Tuck away in your mind one fact about everybody. Does John Marvin like swing music? Then tell him about the good programs you've heard lately.

5—Weather. Still good if you give it a little original twist. "So springlike today I had a touch of hayfever—or was it laziness on my part?"

Just as simple are the other rules followed by good talkers. From our 6-page booklet, Improving Your Conversation, you can quickly learn how to flatter without fawning, to be tactful thing when another has made a break, an unfailing way to appeal to men. Tips on small talk, telephone and business conversations.

Should Fiance Consult Girl's Father

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

It's always a good idea for a young man not to tell a girl's parents that he wants to marry their daughter until he has sufficient financial security to support a home

As a rule, parents do not welcome a suitor without a good position. Usually they have all they can do to maintain their own household. The possibility of having to assume the burden of a second is never promising

Therefore, with the letter that follows in my mind, I say: DON'T LET YOUR HEART RUN AWAY WITH YOUR HEAD. REMEMBER THAT NOT ONE IN A DOZEN LOVES CAN STAND THE TEST OF POVERTY

In other words, don't evict common sense when love enters your life.

I address this advice to all young readers, particularly to John R., who writes

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've known a certain girl for a year, and we've both grown very dear to each other. My parents know we go together, but not hers.

They are very strict and I haven't even met them yet. We want to marry and my girl wants me to come to her house and meet her parents, but as I have no job right now, I feel embarrassed about asking for their daughter's hand in marriage.

We don't want to marry for at least two years, because I figure in that time I'll be established in a position and can take care of a wife.

For this reason, I hesitate to speak to her folks. Am I right in this?

JOHN R.

DEAR JOHN:

Leave no stone unturned to land a permanent and well-paying job. Good luck to you both

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

MODERN CINDERELLA

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My mother died several years ago and I have two sisters at home younger than I am (I'm 20) also a sister and brother who are married.

I have been in hopes of having a home of my own, but it looks as if I never will.

My sister makes it her business to come between me and every boy I bring to the house.

Do you think I ought to leave home and go to work somewhere?

I can get a place as mother's helper, $5 a week and my room and board. My sisters who have made my life a burden are old enough now to do the work around the house.

They're 16 and 18. I've been doing it since I was 13, and think it's time they did it.

PATRICIA.

DEAR PATRICIA:

Before you take that job at $5 a week, talk this case out with your father. He is not aware, perhaps, that your sister's story-telling makes you so unhappy.

Unless there is some valid reason it is better for a girl to stay at home.

If your father doesn't take your troubles seriously, isn't there someone—a teacher, family, pastor, friend—who knows all of you and who will be able to tell you whether it would be advisable to take this job or not?

If you haven't such a friend, take the position with the understanding that you will leave it conditions are not satisfactory.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

SHE SURRENDERS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I just became engaged to a young man who is very good looking and all the girls like him. I really love him and sacrifice all my good times, such as dancing, shows, etc. He doesn't believe in such things.

Once he used to show his love by being sweet and considerate, but of late he's romantic only when under the moon and when the stars are shining.

My sister tells me I sacrifice too much for him, and that makes him dislike her.

I try to appear happy when with him, but deep down I'm very unhappy.

BETTY T.

DEAR CHILD:

When you have to give in so much before marriage, it's probable you'll have to give in even more afterwards.

Stop to think, my dear, that there are many long periods of time in married life when the moon is not shining, and when dark clouds appear.

Fashion Collects Its Chic--It's in the Bag

IT'S GOING TO BE another suit spring, chums, and for this fashion the bag is as important a foil as the bonnet. In fact, sometimes it's even more important when you go strictly classic about your headgear. Then you match up the leathers of bag and shoes and sally forth in triumph, sure of yourself as the Duchess of Kent. You're going to see a return of reptile leathers, particularly crocodile. But for smoothie effects, nothing will better really fine calf. Here are two choice Bienen-Davis models which you'll run into around town. Left, a quadrangular handbag of rather startling simplicity. For those of you who delight in jumbling compacts, combs, cigarette cases, keys and endless junk into your bag, this one is your dramatic triumph. It will give "stage presence" to rough or smooth tweeds, English, French or Hollywood in inspiration! Right, the smaller bag is called "Fashion Whirl," and it's for hopping on the spring merry-go-round. Pliant calf winds around for decoration and a convenient handle.—ANNICE BRINK.

Skating Helps You to Gain Glamour

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Up to now, glamour has somehow been associated with anemia, but Sonja Henie, who is Hollywood's latest glamour girl, is the healthiest star in the movies.

While the languid beauty takes a rest cure between pictures, Sonja goes off on a skating tour.

This career of Sonja's is, in itself, a health and beauty program, and the only activity on a par with swimming for making the figure lovely. Skating strengthens the leg muscles, slims the hips and waistline, beautifies the arms and shoulders and paints roses in the cheeks. What more could you ask of a sport?

Perfect measurements are one reason the ice queen cuts such a fine figure on skates. Her waistline is 26½ inches; bust 34 inches; hips, 35½ inches. With a waist eight inches smaller than the bust and a hipline less than two inches larger than the bust, there is no question of symmetry.

BALANCED MENU

Breakfast	Calories
Orange juice, ½ glass	50
Dry cereal with	50
½ banana, sliced	50
Whole milk, ¾ glass	150
Sugar, 1 rounded tsp.	30
Coffee, clear
	300
Luncheon
Split pea soup, 1 cup	150
Stuffed tomato salad (Reducer's Mayonnaise)	75
Crackers, 2 double	50
Canned peach, ½	50
	325
Dinner
Lamb chops, broiled, 2, trim off all fat)	200
Mint jelly, 1 tsp.	100
Green peas, ½ cup	50
Celery and 4 ripe olives	60
Hot roll	100
Butter, ½ pat	50
Fruit whip, ½ cup	100
	660
Total	1185

To have that kind of figure, exercise must be either a career or a hobby, and stenographers have to work overtime for their streamlines.

GUARD HEALTH

It is no secret that Sonja has beautiful legs. You might suppose her strenuous exercise would lead to overdevelopment, but her calf measurement is only 13¼ inches.

Surprisingly enough, the left calf measures exactly one-fourth inch less than the right. Maybe she skates more on the right leg than on the left . . . exercise does make a difference.

The Sonja Henie who is photographed stepping off trains is very attractive indeed, but she is not in the same class with Sonja on skates. When this star flashes across the ice, her entire personality lights up and she scintillates with an extra beauty.

Health is her most precious possession and she guards it well. Cigarettes and cocktails are not for her, and she gets her full quota of sleep every night. Even so, the strenuous life imposed by her tour has recently caused her to lose weight.

OUTDOOR EXERCISE

It is one thing to skate for fun as she usually does for three hours a day, and quite another to be on one's toes for thousands of people. Ordinarily, her workout leaves Sonja refreshed, because she has learned the secret of relaxing while she skates.

We can all take a lesson from this new glamour girl. For the average woman three hours' activity out-of-doors is an impossibility, but if the business woman would spend one hour in outdoor exercise both her looks and career would benefit.

You may not be able to engage in winter sports, but you can walk for an hour each day. This one health rule will do more for your looks than all the expensive beauty aids.

When your outdoor exercise time is limited you will need specific exercises to keep your measurements streamlined. Send for the "Business Girl's Daily Half Dozen." Accompany your request with a stamped return envelope.

BEAUTY HINTS FOR YOU

WHEN the eyes tire quickly, it may not mean that there is anything wrong with vision. Eyes have a sympathetic nature. When the nervous system is at a tension, the soul lamps suffer from fatigue.

Digestive upsets and constipation will bother the eyes, causing black spots to float before them. Lack of sleep will cause lids to redden. Stale air will cause the surrounding tissues to swell.

Many beauty ills are hitched up with physical conditions that are not normal.

IF a girl is only five or ten pounds overweight, she shouldn't worry about measurements. It is natural for some of us to be slender, natural for others to carry curves. It is only when there are 15 to 20 excess pounds that a reducing regime should be stated.

THIS IS the season when hair moults. If there are more raveling than usual in the comb, do not be alarmed. Your glory thatch is putting its house in order, getting rid of dead shafts, giving the new silky threads a chance to join the waves and ringlets.

During the summer the hair grows faster than it does in winter. When autumn comes it is played out, wants a rest therefore, worry about measurements. It is it needs attention and loving care

New Spring Decorating Colors

TOPMOST among spring decorating colors is a muted underwater sage green, clear and light as in House Beautiful. Then there are the pinks, which go all the way from after-dinner peppermint to coral. Blues are halfway down the scale, neither strong and bright nor faded out. Midway they stand with all the freshness of a spring sky. While in a corner, cropping up at the most surprising moments, are nostalgic violets. As a recurrent accent, there is turquoise.

There is burnt sienna. There is a brassy yellow with an overtone of green. There are browns as dry as sunbaked earth, never wet and chocolaty. There are whites which are never pure whites. And in the midst of this triumph of the pastels, the decorators again turn the ladies on to saying, "What's all this about pastels? We've been using them for seasons. Now we feel that they are only new when they are brought into heady contrast with crisp high colors." So they add wine shades to the picture.

These are wines mixed with water, paler, clearer and more frank than all the burgundies and clarets we have been dabbling in. Then they like the cinnamon browns, amashing deep greens, strong blues

Married Comrades

LILLIAN SOOTHES MADGE

(CHAPTER 3)

By Adele Garrison

LILLIAN was to share my room for the night. We had planned that hastily when we had seen our men going out into the night upon their dangerous errand.

So raw were my nerves as near exhaustion was I, that it seemed to me Lillian would never appear. But when she finally came in after an eternity it seemed to me but in reality after only a few minutes—she took one look at my face and, coming swiftly to the bed side, stooped and gathered me into her strong arms.

"You've got as bad a case of the jitters as I ever saw. I suppose I really ought to get Miss Whitcomb."

Doesn't Want Nurse

"Oh! no, no," I protested frantically.

"All right," she said. "Lie still now, and I'll be with you in a minute. Do you want a drink of water, or hot milk, perhaps?"

"Nothing," I whispered.

She was in night attire only a few seconds after I had spoken the words.

I'm a poor substitute for a drink," she gibed as she crept under the covers beside me. "But I'm quite a dame at soothing frightened, nervous youngsters, and that's what you are tonight. Come heah to yoh mammy, honey chile, and let me put you to sleep."

She put her arms around me, and snuggled me close to her with my head resting against her shoulder. It was such a heavenly haven that my protest was feeble.

Falls Asleep Quickly

"You'll tire yourself so," I said. "Hush yoh mouf, honey!" she said softly. "I'll tend to my own self. All yoh have to do is go to sleep."

So magnetic were her words and the strong clasp of her arms that my frayed nerves smoothed themselves almost instantly, and I was drifting into slumber within two minutes.

It was broad daylight when I awakened with Lillian's hand laid softly upon my wrist in the manner of a nurse awakening a patient.

She was fully dressed and smiling at me with a face as composed and cheery as if she had not a care in the world.

Only her eyes showed the strain she still was under because of her husband's absence.

"How's the girl?" she asked as I started up. "No," she pushed me back. "There's no fire scheduled for another hour or so.

"You don't have to slide down the ladder for another half hour. But I thought you would better waken and orient yourself for a few minutes before you get up. Katie will be up in a jiffy with your breakfast. You're to have it in bed, so you may get busy with your toothbrush whenever you wish."

"You're the eighth wonder" I told her. "You look as fresh as the traditional daisy. And yet did you hold me in your arms all night?"

"About fifteen minutes in all, I should judge," she said. "When I was sure you were soundly asleep I loosened my clasp, and you rolled over like a kitten and stuck your little nose in a pillow.

"I made sure you wouldn't smother, and then went to sleep myself."

A knock at the door, Katie's, sent me scurrying for my toothbrush. When I returned, my faithful housekeeper was spreading a table for two.

"I thought I'd have breakfast here with you," Lillian said. "You may need aid and support."

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

A trio of film-famous notables have networking to do (WEEI) when "Hollywood Hotel" gets the air again from 9 to 10 o'clock this evening.

No less than Gladys Swarthout, John Boles and John Barrymore step into the spotlight to be introduced by Loeulla Parsons, the well known critic and movieland columnist for the Boston Evening American.

These three top ranking artists are summoned to stage a preview version of "Romance in the Dark," as adapted from the forthcoming picture of the same name which, calls will highlight the dramatic portion of the program, hence the recruiting of Miss Swarthout and John Boles. Barrymore will, of course, provide the necessary straight supporting performance, at cost no word is had that he will display his well known tenor tones.

N. F. T.

FLEETING FLASHES

Alexander Kirkland, one of Broadway's successful young actors; Viola Philo, soprano; Art Gentry, nightclub and radio star and Thelma Nevins, rhythm singer, will be featured as guest stars on the "Hammerstein Music Hall" broadcast (WEEI) tonight between 8 and 8:30 p. m.

Kirkland will be remembered for his memorable performance in "Men in White," and is currently starred in the season's hit, "Many Mansions." Viola Philo has been featured as soprano at the New York City Music Hall for the past five years, and has gained immense popularity in her concert tours.

• • •

Women of world renown Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lady Astor among them, will discuss "The Role of Women in the Modern State," in a special broadcast originating in five different nations of the world this afternoon over the networks of the National Broadcasting Company.

SHINING STAR

The program will be heard (WBZ) from 3:00 to 3:30 p. m. It is under the auspices of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women. It is part of the celebration of International Day, which is being observed simultaneously in the 28 countries of the world in which there are branches of the Federation.

Mary Boland, stage and screen comedienne, will be a guest on Paul Whiteman's musical variety program (WEEI) tonight, from 8:30 to 9:00 p. m.

Miss Boland, who has just completed a film comedy with Ernest Truex, called, "Mama Runs Wild," will make a special airplane trip from Hollywood to New York for her air appearance.

• • •

The Gypsy Song from Bizet's opera, "Carmen," will be sung by Lucille Manners, the popular soprano as a highlight of her coast-to-coast concert (WNAC) with Rose Graham, baritone, the choir and Dr. Frank Black's orchestra. She can do it again this evening at 8 o'clock.

Miss Manners also plans to sing "Anne Huguete," by Frim., "Some Day My Prince Will Come" by Churchill, and, with Graham, "Wanting You," by Romberg.

• • •

REFLECTING ROMANCE

The story of a flower garden in the Nevada desert, and the part it played in the lives of two human beings, is scheduled to be told by the "Old Ranger" during the "Death Valley Days" half hour (WBZ) tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

The little walled flower garden was brought here from England almost 60 years ago and still blooms in a ghost camp on the desert.

Incorrect Shoes Cause Grave Damage

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

IN CERTAIN sections of the world where no foot covering of any sort is used, few if any, deformities of the feet are experienced.

But our present mode of living demands some protection for the feet. We cannot get along with sandals or go barefooted, and so must use shoes.

Unfortunately many shoes are designed for style rather than for comfort. Sometimes they do not conform to the shape of the foot. Continued pressure and constriction of the toes leads to inflammation and deformity of the joints of the foot.

Like other joints of the body the foot joints are surrounded by sacs. These sacs contain a fluid known as synovial fluid.

This is a lubricating substance promoting free movement of the joint. The sac which surrounds the joint and contains the fluid is known as a "bursa."

If a toe or joint is subjected to pressure and irritation, the bursa will become inflamed producing a condition called "bursitis." In addition to inflammation of the sac, there may be marked inflammation of the skin overlying the part. Then there exists what is known as a "bunion."

HAS OTHER CAUSES

"Hallux valgus" the medical name for bunion, may have other causes than the wearing of improper fitting shoes.

For example, it may be caused by some constitutional disorder such as arthritis, gout, diabetes or rheumatism. Sometimes the condition may appear without any history of pressure or irritation. Such cases are believed by some to be hereditary.

If a bunion is recognized in its early stages cure can be accomplished without any difficulty.

In the hands of a competent person it is perhaps one of the most minor of all surgical procedures.

I venture to say that a person severely afflicted with this disorder and resort to the use of bunion plasters and other devices

Boston Hockey Fans Cooperate in Rowdy Renaissance

I THINK YOU WILL AGREE THAT professional hockey as now being played at the Boston Garden is the one remaining sport in which the customers are entitled to take part in the action. The paying-guests are granted discretionary poking privileges at the athletes, provided, of course, they accept the inherent risk of being poked back, and frequently avail themselves of that right. There was, for example, last Sunday's little incident when several Bostonians dealt themselves into the brawl as Eddie Shore of the Bruins and Babe Pratt of the New York Rangers were busy busting each other back and forth in the penalty box. Some of the fans in the immediate background helped themselves to a piece of the fight by fetching Pratt a lick here and a sock there.

AUSTEN LAKE

You may recall that one of these fans pitched a wild punch which caught Shore on the cheekbone. "I regret deeply my inadvertence in landing you a wallop intended for Whats'isname," the fan hastened to apologize. But Shore assured him that 'twerenot nawthin', considering the untabulated total of jolts, biffs and busts he had received during his long career. "That sock is on the house," said Eddie generously.

That was the same night wasn't it when the mad fan fired bottles and programs from the top balcony, and the night when a frantic fan grabbed a Ranger by the back of his shirt as he came scooting near the side boards? Nor do the hockey fans think anything of spilling over the fences, on occasion, and skidding toward the center of any rink fight in the hope of landing one or more boots on a alien puss as their contribution to home town loyalty.

* * *

Wrestling, Too, Was Once Cooperative

THIS IS BECAUSE, OF ALL OUR GAMES, professional hockey alone preserves the illusion a team of civic loyalists contending with teams of foreign renegades. I think the citizens ought to be told, don't you, that the Bruins and Rangers are not Bostonians and New Yorkers respectively, but a lot of mercenaries from thither and yon? Eddie Shore, the darling of the press coop, is out of Edmonton by way of Calgary, and so forth; though I suppose it detracts nothing from the charm of hockey that the athletes are not residents of the cities they represent.

It is very good for the customers to take part in the ructions on the ice because there is little left of the cooperative games in which our citizens, both male and female, can expel their inner poisons by biffing somebody for something, which at the moment seems very vital, but the reason for which they forget soon after.

Wrestling used to furnish a wholesome outlet for internal acidosis hereabouts in the time when Gus Sonnenberg was elevating the sport from a boresome kind of physical labor to a profitable and popular form of public entertainment. The ringside parishioners liked to lift the skirts of their overcoats and kick the contestants in the features as they sailed through the ropes and cruised around the concrete floor. Even during Danno O'Mahony's first illusionary struggles, the fans swarmed down in the grand finale riots and took their busts indiscriminately at friend or foe. Those were the good days, but the breed of wrestling fans has softened in direct proportion as the sport became more formalized.

* *

Baseball Frowns On It

IT IS BY NO MEANS UNUSUAL FOR A hockey player, distracted in the midst of his duties, to spank a customer on the nose. Last year Lynn Patrick of the Rangers whoed up in midflight and belted a Bostonian in a box for some disparagement spoken or implied. And before that Lionel Conacher of the Maple Leafs smacked somebody in passing through the player's runway.

This is wholly within the jurisdiction of the hockey athletes and a matter dictated by individual conscience. For the League provides no penalty, or at least inflicts none, perhaps on the assumption these are private fights, mutually provoked, and therefore not subject to outside intrusion.

But in major league baseball any player who reaches over the piperails and, for however sufficient reasons, pokes a customer, that player is immediately tweezed from the lineup and fined a large lump of his pay. In baseball the customer must not be poked.

I think the last ball player to so poke a customer was a Pittsburgh catcher named "Oil" Smith, a notorious incorrigible who is now doing time with the House of David team. And in 1927, Oil climbed into a Braves Field box and swatted a client a very vigorous swipe which so dumfounded the recipient that he scarcely recovered presence of mind until Oil was ducking into the players' tunnel, at which point the citizen swung an iron chair and took a nice divot from Oil's scalp.

* * *

THAT WAS THE HAPPENING WHICH led President John A. Heydler to publish a ukase forbidding the ball players from walloping the customers—particularly the box customers. Because, he said, these were the golden geese who helped pay the stockholders' dividends, and if the athletes were allowed to biff the occupants of these preferred locations, pretty soon they would move back to the cheaper seats to the great detriment of the gate receipts.

Being generally closer to the action the hockey patron may feel himself an intimate part of the show. In the hysteria of the action he is apt to mistake himself for one of the actors. But even here one notices a tendency to slump below the lofty standard of past years when the Boston fans in the upper galleries tossed hunks of pipe, chair-arms and empty drinking flasks overboard.

There was a momentary, nostalgic whiff of the glorious past when that fan slipped off his gumshoes last Sunday and scaled them onto the rink. But even then I am told the fan called for his rubbers at the office on his way out. That gives you an idea of how the times are beginning to soften even in hockey. No fan ever called for his bottles, tobacco tins or hardware after once having heaved them to the edge dog.

Robert Faces Toehold Master Olson In Opening Match of New Title Drive

'I'll Pay Him Back For Breaking My Leg'—Yvon

Yvon Robert, recently deposed world heavyweight wrestling champion, will be a slight betting favorite over his nemesis, Cliff Olson, blond Minnesotan, when they collide in the headline bout at the Garden tonight.

Although Olson broke Robert's leg in three places with his toehold in a Wrigleyfield match nearly two years ago, Boston fans and the French-Canadian youth's fellow countrymen favor Robert because they didn't see that Washington mix-up.

Besides they haven't seen Robert in any other title than that of a mere score before he won the championship.

FANS WITH ROBERT

There are those too, who figure Robert was robbed by the American Wrestling Association, when that organization took the title away from him.

"Titles are won and lost in the ring, and Yvon has not been beaten. He's still world's champion with us," his supporters declare.

These fans will be out in large numbers tonight cheering Robert and showing they still have faith in him.

For Olson is a tough hombre and has the best toehold in the game.

Hitler was a victim of it twice in Boston. He has beaten everybody he's faced up to Yvon.

Robert will be making his first appearance here since he was forced to meet Steve (Crusher) Casey in a world championship try.

A victory would elevate either into the front rank of contenders.

OLSON UNREPENTANT

Robert appears in excellent condition. Outdoor life at Camp Maupas, deep in Canada, appears to have thoroughly agreed with him.

Olson, like Robert, appears in splendid condition. However, he hasn't gone through any too rugged grind as did Robert in Camp Maupas.

He has done his training in George Bothner's New York gymnasium and has used Central Park for his road work.

Both are crammed with confidence.

"I'm going to beat Olson this time," declares Robert. "I'm going to pay him back for what he did to me in Washington.

"The long layoff caused by my broken leg and doctor bills made that mishap cost me a fortune. However, I'll get it back by beating Olson and then forcing Casey to meet me.

"I'll win back the title, too. I am in excellent condition. If I should lose I will offer no alibi. However, if that happens I'm going to hang up my trunks for all time.

"I expect a tough battle but I will beat Robert again," Olson declares. "I will have a big psychological edge over him.

"He'll be thinking all through the match of the time I broke his leg. I'll break it again, too, if he refuses to give up to my toehold."

Bowser has arranged an excellent supporting cast for tonight's show. Giant Petro Gobbo, Stanislaus Zbyszko's importation from Italy will make his debut in the semifinal. He drawa a tough opponent in 265-pound Tor Johnson.

There may be added fireworks at tonight's Garden show. It is reported in sporting circles that Sammy Samaras, colored heavyweight, who claims the world championship and who has been managed by Charley Gordon, will leap into the ring on Robert.

"I hope he tries it," Promoter Bowser said. "Either Roberts or Olson will take care of Seelie."

4-Team Battle Seen for A. A. U. Ice Crown

The National Hockey Championships to be held at the Boston Arena tomorrow and Sunday, and in which the winner must play four games in two days looms now as a four-team battle.

St. Nicks of New York Brooklyn team champions of Connecticut Massena A. Stars winners of the Adirondack district and the defending champions Boston Olympics are the aspirants most likely to succeed.

The surprise package in the series seems to be the Massena team of New Haven. The Hub boys were organized only two years ago but their record is very impressive.

This season they have bowed only twice, both times to the St. Nicks in overtime. They held one victory over the New York team.

Perhaps the best known in these parts is little Clem Harned, who used to perform in the nets for Walter Brown Harvard, in new attending Arnold College in New Haven along with his present teammates Bath Pudvah and Harry Thompson.

Thompson is a winger on the same line, was at one time at Hebron Academy.

Lavengro to Win Rich Flamingo, Wilson Says

By DAVE WILSON

Club Must Do as Well as in '37 Or Else—

By JOE CASHMAN

BRADENTON, Fla., Feb. 25.—A brand new and strikingly different chapter in the history of Boston's National League ball club begins unfolding here today.

After eight seasons under the expert guidance of Wilkinsburg Will McKechnie, assisted by Henry "Hank" Gowdy, the Alston athletes now start taking orders from Charles Dillon Stengel. Years to you and a couple of others named Kelly, George and Mize.

And after a long [illegible] conditioning at St. Petersburg for the past 15 years, they now find themselves quartered across the bay from the Sunshine City in Bradenton, where the [illegible] Bob Quinn during the Red Sox in 1928 and 1929.

'Finest Defensive Outfielder Who Ever Lived', Says Duffy Lewis of Old Mate, Tris Speaker

'Outfield Shortstop,' McGraw Termed Sox Star After 1912 Series

By GEORGE E. "DUFFY" LEWIS.

Traveling Secretary Boston Bees and Former Proprietor of "Duffy's Cliff"

As Told to Walter Kier

It brings back a wealth of wonderful memories to be delving at this late date into the history and colorful career of Tristram Speaker, the Texan.

Harry Hooper Tris and I roamed Fenway Park's outer pastures for many long years together. They were ripe years, rich in experiences. It doesn't seem possible that we patrol'd mates on the Red Sox more than two decades ago.

(Editor's Note—What the author doesn't mention is that Speaker, Hooper and Lewis were rated the greatest outfield trio of all time.)

Whenever one begins to compare outfielders during the first quarter of the century Tris Speaker's name is bound to creep into the picture. Cobb had everything.

HE COULD HIT, TOO

But to my mind Tris never was any greater fielder than Speaker. He was certainly the best in my time, if not of all time.

As for hitting, there was little difference. In a straightaway hitting for distance and extra bases Tris was the better despite Cobb's superior record in the air game.

My old Red Sox mate hit the ball just as hard as Cobb if not harder. But the Georgian was more apt to be employed to beat out bunts and fly balls, thereby making a big difference. This was about the only department where the Detroit star was the better.

Great hitters are not remembered long after the deeds of great fielders are dimmed by time.

But I'll be bold to state Speaker as the finest defensive outfielder ever. This despite the fact that he had an average of .345 over a period of 20 years, in the majors, and is, with the one exception of 1919 when he batted .319, the only man to hold the .300 mark in all his years as a regular.

There never was a ballplayer who paced a game up to second who made as many putouts or threw like Tris. The game I ever saw he equal for raising pegs for the bag.

I can easily picture him tearing toward the wall, his back to the plate, and then reaching up to pluck the ball out of the air over his shoulder.

There was a picture. Just as it was a pleasure to see him hang on to the short drives while he skidded over the grass on his stomach.

ALL OVER OUTFIELD

It is true that Cobb was faster. Yet it is also true that Speaker covered more ground than Ty. He got a wonderful break on the ball off with the crack of the bat, going further to right and left than any other fielder I ever knew of and invariably doing the right thing at the right moment.

As for his arm, it was one of the most powerful and accurate ever to cut down a too-daring baserunner.

He covered as much ground that Hooper and I had things comparatively easy. He made us look good.

I never realized his full value until after he had been traded to Cleveland in 1916 and Joe Wood came to the Red Sox to replace him.

Then we had to go after fly balls that Speaker used to get. We certainly noticed the difference.

Tris was always the key man in our outfield defense. Every day after practice we'd go into the clubhouse for a meeting. We'd discuss how to play certain hitters. But we always followed his suit.

Young Tris Speaker arrives in Boston with his mother for a trial with the Boston Speed Boys. The beginning of one of the most illustrious careers in the annals of the game.

Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker at the height of their careers in 1912. They were the two greatest centerfielders in history.

If he missed toward right field, I shifted with him. If he came over my left field Hooper also came over.

We used to bunch up a lot more in the outfield than they do now. And it was a help when we had great pitchers on the mound as we did then.

If we had a dead left field hitter, we shifty McInnis I'd be placed over in that direction. Speaker and I'd play around.

SWUNG THREE BATS

Tris was to Tris. We never got our signals mixed. We never once interfered. He would sit wave his hands to us when he had an easy chance.

When it was a tough one, the first man to the ball would yell out "I got it!" The other two would lay off, not make it."

If one had got away from the short stop you'd find Speaker backing him up. If it got away from Hooper he'd be there on the spot. The same was true when the ball came to me or victory.

He was full of little baseball tricks, too.

He never would warm up with anyone other than Bill Carrigan before the game. He was always the first man on the field, ever with a bat in his hand, usually bunting.

Like Larry Lajoie, Joe Medwick and a lot of other great hitters Tris felt that such work helped his batting eye.

Another habit amounting to a superstition was carrying three bats to the plate swinging them all lustily before he selected the one he was going to use. By that time I must have felt like a feather.

Then he'd draw lines in the batter's box and hit his heels close before taking a stance.

ALWAYS A TEAM MAN

Wherever he made the third putout he'd carry the ball back and toss it in the pitcher's box. He never threw it in. On the first and second outs he tossed it around to Hooper and me, and we did the same with him.

I remember how he'd take a file and flatten out the side of the bat, and then deface it to escape notice. He felt that this would offset fouls he got away with it too.

In spite of being the star of the ball club he was always a team player, with a world of spirit, putting the other fellows on the back feeding them words of encouragement.

The players liked him and respected him. He carried out orders like the lowliest member of the team. Give him the hit and run and he was ready.

There was one time when he and I had our only run in. It was a matter of slight importance which we magnified. We didn't speak for several weeks except to say "I've got it."

Yet when I'd give him the hit and run he forgot our differences and took it without question.

BORN IN TEXAS

As for batting he didn't care whether the pitcher was a right or left hander. He just hit them all the same.

He could hit anywhere, an outside ball into right field. And any time you can do that you're a great man with the willow.

He was a loyal fellow. He thought the world of his mother who lived in Hubbard, Texas, where Tris was born on April 4, 1888.

Whenever he had the chance he'd skip home to see her. He'd be calling her up on the telephone and have her come up to St. Louis when we were playing there. We always felt that a fellow so good to his mother couldn't be wrong.

If he took a liking for anyone he'd do anything for them.

There was a young kid newsboy who used to sell papers on the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Boylston street.

When Tris was traded to Cleveland he brought the "kid" with him and got him a job in the clubhouse.

Soon the kid was made trainer and he's still with the Indians in that capacity, boasts a big salary and swears allegiance to Speaker forever.

Tris always took great care of himself, never abusing his constitution. He roomed with Joe Wood in the old Red Sox days. He was a great hockey fan. It was all amateur hockey then.

He used to rave over Princeton's Hobey Baker.

BROKE RIGHT ARM

He never became swelled head, in spite of the fact that he was getting a top salary.

It was said to be about $18,000 a year, which is certainly small by comparison with what fellows of today with far lesser ability are commanding.

Some of our subs are getting $8000 a year now for sitting on the bench and doing nothing. Speaker was a left-handed batter, a left-handed thrower.

His portside tossing came about through an accident when he was in only 10 year old. He was tossed from the back of a bronco breaking his right arm and collarbone. Forced to use his left hand after the injury, he found it to be far stronger than his right ever was. He never changed back.

He pitched for his high school team and was captain. He picked up a good outcurve which he found easy to throw.

To the very end of his baseball career he always allowed for a curve when throwing in from the outfield, finding it gave a great deal more distance than a straight ball.

He turned to baseball through circumstance. Were it right and he was dropped from his two dollar a week job with a Texas telephone company. Since he'd many a time thanked his lucky stars for being fired.

He started his professional baseball with Houston of the Texas League and later was transferred to Little Rock of the Southern Association.

Boston bought him from Houston for the paltry sum of $400 in 1907 and sent him back to pay a debt, returning to the fold a year later.

He got his first real toe hold in the majors in 1909, took over the centerfield berth and never relinquished it, proving a mighty factor in the Red Sox winning the World Championships of 1912 and 1915.

He went to Cleveland in 1916 managed the Indians from 1919 through 1926 and won the pennant for them in 1920, the world championship as well.

Later he played at Washington and Philadelphia, strangely enough finishing his actual playing career alongside of Ty Cobb, his dearest rival, at Philly.

Spoke holds the major league record of 11 consecutive box for five years he led the American League in two baseball, total all outfielders with an assist total of 461 and was voted the most valuable player in the circuit in 1912.

Manager McGraw of the Giants was so impressed with his style of outfield play in the 1912 World Series that he declared

"This fellow's no outfielder; he'd an outfield shortstop."

Incidentally, the "Little Giant" missed getting Tris by the matter of some 24 hours.

The Giants had come up from Marlin, Texas, to play a practice exhibition game with Mike Finn's Little Rock team.

A local outfielder was wheeling the ball unmercifully. The first time he took his turn at the plate McGraw said:

"Watch that fellow. He's a natural hitter. Bet he hits the ball a mile."

McGRAW WANTED HIM

Spoke did, and he continued to do so throughout the game. McGraw then called Finn over and said him he might give the kid a try-out.

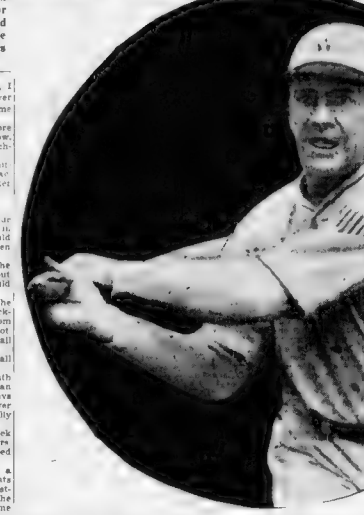
"Too late," said Mike. "The Red Sox got an option on him only yesterday."

McGraw often spoke about the incident later and with sad regret.

Spoke, like the rest of us, has passed the game on to youngsters. He's boxing commissioner of Cleveland now and well fixed financially.

We're still the best of friends.

Wish that Tris and Harry and myself were 20 years younger. What fun to hear Speaker yell out once more "I've got it."



Twilight of great career. Tris as member of Washington club after spending his best days with Boston and Cleveland. Even in his 40's, Tris could hit with the best of them.

CY YOUNG

Bob Quinn Tells Of 'Cy' Tomorrow

J. A. Robert Quinn, president of the Boston Bees, is one of the real veterans of baseball. He knew Cy Young well and, consequently, of this great pitcher's talents.

Quinn has written a fine story, rich in detail, about this star who was standing them on their heels both before and after the turn of the century.

When you get through reading this article, you'll realize why Young is one of the most admired players in baseball's Hall of Fame.

This story, sixth in the Hall of Fame series, will be published in all editions of tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

Others, completing the series, on Christy Mathewson, Walter Johnson and Hans Wagner, will follow daily, in the Sunday Advertiser and Evening American.

Don't miss this chance to catch up on the heroes of yesteryear.

14 Harvard Teams Active Tomorrow

In Addition, Water Carnival Will Be Staged in Crimson Pool—Quintet Must Beat Penn to Remain in Title Hunt

Fourteen Harvard teams will go into action tomorrow in the heaviest Saturday scheduling of the winter season to date. Six of the teams will compete at home, eight away. In addition there will be a Water Carnival in the Harvard Pool starting at 8 p. m.

Leading the sports parade at home are the appearances of the varsity and freshman track teams in the Third Annual Quadrangular Meet to be run off in the Boston Garden tomorrow night.

Coach Stahley will send his freshman basketball team against Tabor Academy of Marion at 2:30 p. m., while the freshman swimming team, undefeated, faces Andover Academy in a dual meet in the pool at 3 o'clock.

To complete the listing of home games the varsity squash team meets Princeton at 2:30 p. m. Fencing matches include Yale, the varsity and freshman hockey games with Yale at Soldiers Field, the varsity basketball game with Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

The varsity hockey teams are more evenly matched than in past years. A close game is seen with Harvard a slight favorite.

In order to run out in the race for the Eastern League crown with Dartmouth, Wes Fenwick Pabst's Tech lads must sweep over Penn. If they lose this hurdle in stride Wednesday's battle for the title with Dartmouth at the Indoor Gym should be one of the best college games of the season.

Additionally, the varsity wrestling team meets Princeton at Princeton the varsity polo team rides against Yale at New Haven and Rene Peroy's varsity and freshman fencers will compete against Technology at Tech.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

N.E. Trade Slightly Improved

Rosier Hopes Have Not Yet Been Realized

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The rosier hopes expressed for New England business a week ago have not as yet been translated into actualities. The views of conditions in this area in the past week contain some cheerful notes, but on the whole they are not strong enough to warrant flat declaration of better times ahead. Another week is needed to form more definite ideas on spring trade volume.

* * *

Dun & Bradstreet say that textiles and shoes are looking up, and even though trade in other lines continues at low ebb, any gains by these two important and widespread industries is welcome. If the trend persists over the next week there will be nothing for pessimism to feed on. Prices are the real key to the cotton goods situation and we note reports that a large volume of such goods changed hands at steady prices. Cotton blankets rule 12 to 15 per cent under a year ago and cutting flannels are down 1½ cents a yard. However, as previously noted, the willingness of consumer goods manufacturers to pass on lower costs is the answer to their relatively quick recoveries. At the same time, the experience of a leading interest in advancing percale prices, and obtaining a heavy volume of business proves that if prices work too low and then advance buyers are not slow in responding.

* * *

Although tanners are still buying cautiously some increase in the call for hides and skins was noted in the past week and prices held steady. The leather market, on the other hand, is pictured as somewhat weak. These differences probably account for the competitive attitude of quality shoe buyers; manufacturers consequently are expressing output quite cautiously. The woolen factory is running at only about 50 per cent, which is considered seasonally low by the trade. Retail shoe distributors have had a good year and if leather prices stiffened or perhaps even leveled off in a manner indicative of the end of the decline they might buy more aggressively.

* * *

TAX HITS DIVIDEND

For the first time since establishment of dividends in 1926, with the exception of the first quarter of 1933 quarters, Chrysler has omitted a dividend. And the action is attributed directly to the undistributed surplus tax. And so long as it is in force dividends may be expected to fluctuate. Walter E. Hutchson, chairman of Chrysler's finance committee, points out that such legislation makes it impossible for directors of a corporation to adjust the rate to a long term stable policy. And will add that such taxation instead of helping to smooth out trade curves actually accentuates them. For if good times are to be made better by forced payment of nearly all income then bad times are made more acute by the lack of surplus funds to pay dividends and thus cushion declines.

* * *

The news story from Washington yesterday telling of the tax revision plans of the House committee headed by Representative Vinson may be the beginning of a new era. But until the Senate has had its say on taxes we would take nothing for granted. As a committee of the Senate may insist on greater liberality but in this it must combat administration insistence on no loss in aggregate tax income.

MARKET PUZZLE

The stock market is supplying would-be analysts with something of a puzzle these days. After both averages climbed sharply the defined resistance levels some measure of reaction was natural. However, and possibly this is a sign of seasonal view, the rails moved in a very restricted range instead of taking full advantage of their protection possibilities. We would have liked them to come off more markedly. This case may be recalled in here by an immediate surpassing of rally highs. The point simply being that a healthier rally is the more look false as a top formation is constructed. The emphasis with us is still on technical factors than business and trade factors in looking at the market.

Americanism Offers Most, Says Forbes

Noted Writer Talks To Students In Georgia

By B. C. FORBES

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 25—Privileged to make a talk today at the University of Georgia, to a gathering which included members of the Georgia Press Institute, I addressed myself especially to the rising generation.

The father of five sons, I have gathered that at prep schools and colleges a disturbingly large number of teachers promulgate strongly socialistic, not to say revolutionary, ideas.

There is a tendency to extol much that has been happening abroad, to excoriate America's record under the Old Deal, and to urge New Dealers to go much farther in concentrating authority in our federal administration—that is, to rush America along Totalitarian lines.

I pleaded with the youth of today not to form snap judgments, but to ponder what was accomplished under the Old Deal.

AMERICA WEALTHIEST

Conceding frankly that our capitalistic system developed defects which demanded remedial legislation, and admitting that the New Deal had given us a number of salutary reforms, I asked them to give proper weight to such Old Deal accomplishments as these:

America became the most wealthy, the most prosperous nation on the face of the earth.

Our standards of living became the envy of the world.

Americans became owners of 80 per cent of the world's motor cars, 60 per cent of the world's telephones and an overwhelming proportion of the world's radios.

Americans rolled up saving of $24,500,000,000, owned by 44,000,000 depositors, representing one-and-a-half savings accounts for each family in the land.

No fewer than 64,000,000 Americans were able to purchase life insurance protection to the amount of $110,000,000,000.

We accumulated two-thirds of civilization's banking resources and about half of the world's gold.

PURCHASING POWER UP

The purchasing power of our 130,000,000 people became greater than that of the 500,000,000 inhabitants of Europe.

Nowhere else on earth were so many families able to send their children to college—we have 1,200,000 college students.

We convey no fewer than 3,000,000 children to school in buses daily.

The rank and file of Americans are able to indulge in more home and foreign travel than any other nationals on the face of the globe.

Daily, 12,500,000 enjoy movies.

More Americans own homes than any other nationality.

Not only do 100,000,000 Americans live in electrically-lighted homes, but such commonplace comforts as domestic refrigeration, washing machines, vacuum cleaners and other home labor-saving appliances are beyond the reach of ordinary families throughout the rest of the world.

The working classes here have the greatest average income of any people, work the shortest hours, have at their command the largest number of "mechanical slaves," wear better clothes and eat better food than the inhabitants of any other country.

MEASURE OF FREEDOM

I contrasted not only our material possessions with those of other peoples but drew a picture of the measure of freedom heretofore enjoyed in the United States with the prevailing curbing of individual freedom in countries under dictators, notably Russia, Germany, Italy. Also I analyzed the plight of France, where socialistic legislation has been on the ascendency.

I counseled caution in applauding any step which would undermine America's cherished liberties and institutions, any steps towards setting up here governmental conditions akin to those where centralized control has been carried to extremes, where the state is teaching the children and youth that their highest mission is to become cannon fodder.

Rukeyser Asks Labor Expenses

Expert Says Unions Should Make Public Financial Data

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, Feb. 25—Merryle Stanley Rukeyser, financial commentator for International News Service and author of "The Diary of a Prudent Investor," in an address before the Teachers Association at Port Washington, L. I., urged modification of Federal statues requiring truth in financial statements to include labor unions as well as employing corporations.

"Full publicity as to receipts and expenditures of trade unions," Mr. Rukeyser declared, "would safeguard the rank and file of members against the hazard of racketeering leadership. The government has already paved the way by setting up standards of accounting for corporations.

SCORES WAGNER ACT

"The next logical step would be to impose similar bookkeeping standards on labor unions and on the fiscal statements of the federal government itself."

Pointing to the need for revision of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, Mr. Rukeyser added:

"The government as policeman should enforce the law impartially and should make sure that business and labor shall proceed together along legal lines. It should go further and make certain that the law conforms to truly social objectives and to the requirements of a balanced internal economy.

"It is important not only to protect the 7,000,000 workers who are claimed as union members, but also the entire 51,000,000 Americans subject to gainful employment."

REGULATION ONE-SIDED

Mr. Rukeyser indicated that evolution of popular thinking on trade unionism is likely to take this country in the direction of British Labor legislation.

The British trades disputes act of 1927, he pointed out, defines the rights and responsibilities of unions, and outlaws general strikes and forced contribution by union members to political funds.

Concluding, Mr. Rukeyser said: "I am opposed to too much regulation, either of employers or of employes. At present, we have one-sided regulation, setting up standards for the employer, but not for the labor unions."

Bankers Rates Unchanged

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (INS)—Bankers acceptance rates unchanged with 30, 60 and 90-day bills at ½ per cent to 7-16 per cent; four months' bills at 9-16 per cent to ⅝ per cent, and five and six months at ⅝ per cent to 9-16 per cent.

Time money offered at 1¼ per cent for maturities up to 90 days, 1½ per cent for four, five and six months. Commercial paper unchanged at 1 per cent. Federal funds at ½ per cent.

Call money on bills and Treasuries ⅛ of 1 per cent and call money renewed at 1 per cent, both unchanged

Excess Reserves Up $50,000,000

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (INS)—Excess reserves of member banks throughout the country increased $50,000,000 to about $1,410,000,000 in the week ended Wednesday, the Federal Reserve report revealed today. This placed them within $30,000,000 of the $1,440,000,000 peak reached on January 26.

Actual reserves gained only $24,000,000, but decreases in deposits served to enlarge the expansion in excess reserves. Money in circulation rose $22,000,000, which is slightly more than half the average increase for the period over the year.

Local bank credit continued to decline, a decrease of $7,000,000 in loans and investments of member banks in the New York district being reported. Loans were off $25,000,000. Investments rose $14,000,000.

New Promise of American Life Still Bright

Rukeyser Sees Hope Once Atmosphere Is Clarified

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (INS)—After the New Deal, what?

This question is raised from the non-partisan standpoint of the future destiny of the United States.

It attempts to deal with the issue of whether the American dream of unlimited progress for the individual is over.

What lies beyond the mountain of the present bickering between government and business?

Is our business civilization to become poorly definitive and, henceforth, be satisfied with holding what it has against Communism and Fascism?

WRITER OPTIMISTIC

This writer believes that the new promise of American life is still bright, and that once the atmosphere is clarified this country, achieving a new cooperative spirit among government, business management, and labor, will move upward and onward.

In a series of debates around the country against disparagers of the American system, including Messrs. Lewis Corey and George Soule, this writer has upheld the thesis that our free enterprise system, aided by science and invention, is capable of great further growth and progress.

In the circumstances, he especially welcomes the publication of a new book by two Chicagoans which affirmatively restates the thesis of vivid and progressive Americanism. C. D. Murphy, a business man, and H. V. Prochnow, a banker, in their new volume, entitled, "The Next Century Is America's," give the public a basis for reasoned long-term hope and confidence.

Pointing to the need of a spiritual revival of basic American ideals, the authors conclude:

"Then indeed shall all things be added thereto, and America shall become the land of our pride. It will excell in the detail and the sum of those measures of greatness, intangible as well as tangible, upon which we agreed at the outset.

"It may set time's farthest seamark in freedom for the individual. It may explore new frontiers in the achievement of quick and genuine justice; it may reach new breadths of opportunity, take new strides in the intelligence and farsightedness with which a truly educated public blend self interest and community interest.

"It may reduce to a minimum both the cost and the legal complications of government—attain to new records in present distribution of the desirable things of life, and in future protection of the resources of nature and knowledge as a heritage to prosperity."

AMERICAN WAY BEST

Instead of suggesting that we find salvation by importing old world isms whether from the right or from the left, the authors propose that the American way will prove the road to plenty for other nations.

"The road America has pioneered," they point out, "may then become a revived highway for the swifter advancement of less fortunate nations. The American idea—the freedom of mind over impulse and prejudice, the freedom and happiness of the individual, the right of every man to the point where the equal rights of others are met—these ideals may become the eager objectives of other peoples with our friendly help.

"Only by that means can boundaries ever cease to bristle with fortresses and become as unnecessary between nations as between neighbors. This is the vision of our young men and their children's children."

These Chicagoans are writing about America, where 60,000,000 savings depositors, with 64,000,000 life insurance policy holders, with 80 per cent of the world's life insurance, to the people with five-eighths of all the world's automobiles, to the people with more than 50 per cent of the world's telephones, to the people with more than 56 per cent of the world's telephones, to a nation of 14,000,000 homeowners, and to a nation with at least 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 owners of shares in American corporations. The American people, with this large share of the world's goods, constitute but 6½ per cent of the world's population.

ABOUT BUSINESS MAN

And in behalf of the much hailed business man, the authors declare:

"The real body of American business men have devoted their energies and capital mainly to supplying more and better services at lower and lower prices. In so doing, they have broadened enormously the general living standards and increased the buying power of money beyond anything ever previously achieved. Their reputation for integrity and sportsmanship has not been exceeded.

"Despite their obvious shortcomings and their evident failure to guarantee even a tolerable position at all times, they have helped millions in America to a security and a richness of life not approached by the masses in any other land or age. The scope and scale of their accomplishments admit no close second."

The Brighter Side

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1938, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International Copyright and all other rights reserved.

EN ROUTE, Feb. 25.—You have a distinct recollection of many a long journey in old day coaches which was always dreadfully hot, dreadfully cold, and which, somehow, always seemed to be filled with crying children and tired mothers.

To this day, the odor of bananas or apples or oranges in a day coach room makes you ill, and you realize that this goes back to those wearying rides over the western railroads back down the years.

Damon Runyon

The Damon Runyon train butchers specialized in those fruits in those days.

The negro was wooden and had few safety devices and time was one of those trains was wrecked the cars caught fire and terrible loss of life followed. You remember the frightful head-on collision west of Pueblo and the Eden wreck, though this last was due to a washout, and death was more merciful to the passengers.

It took a long time to get anywhere on those old trains, especially in the mountains of Colorado where sometimes the railroad tracks were narrow gauge and the cars seemed to be crawling along at their own sweet will. You remember a trip you took on one of those narrow gauge lines through the San Luis Valley with Alva Adams, father of the current United States Senator from Colorado.

The old gentleman was campaigning for governor and was out with him on the back platform of the last car of the train when the train was the two of you let your legs dangle down not far above the rails and watched the mighty Sangre de Christo range roll past and he told you stories of his early life in that section of the state.

ALAMOSA ALSO

You remember you got to a town called Alamosa, where Alva Adams said he used to run a saloon, and folks came around and told Mr. Adams that Judge Ben Lindsay, his opponent, had been there a few days before, saying some mean things about him.

It was that same Judge Ben Lindsay whose name was in the news recently because he presided over the Wright insanity hearing in Los Angeles, and you reflect that the old judge has sure been nibbling at that public trough a long time if you cannot rule him off for that. There are thousands of men in this country of far less ability who have made a career of living off the public.

You have never forgotten Alva Adams' speech in Alamosa, because when he faced his old neighbors he made reference to the fact that he understood the judge had been in there talking behind his back, and they Mr. Adams said, very gently:

"I fear Ben Lindsay has come to the San Luis Valley to give me a reputation just 35 years too late!"

You remember how the crowd chuckled at that and then Mr. Adams got on talking about something else. He was a fine gentleman, that old Alva Adams, and he left a fine son to carry on his name in politics and in private life, too.

RAILROADS AND FLYING

Now here you are riding in the last word in railroad transportation—the so-called streamlined train that looks like a costly metal toy. It is the railroad's answer to flying, but you reflect that flying will never really challenge the railroad for long hops until they can fly regardless of the weather.

It is mighty bothersome being grounded in some of those towns where they set you down when the weather ain't ahead is no good.

You wonder why the air companies have not thought of special entertainment to get their doomed customers in those spots. A night club with a few bright hostesses might be a good idea. The most lonesome fellow in this world is a grounded air passenger.

You are up talking to the barber about the difference in traveling in this train in the old day coaches and he said you can see why the tourist sleepers they used to have were no bargains.

The manicurist on this train says things have certainly changed. She has been on this run eleven years and when she started they had not to have one nail polish. Now she has twenty-one different colors and even then she gets a few kicks for something she does not have. The popular color right now, she said, is the new shade of tan.

BABIES STILL CRY

The maid gets paid the same as the porter, around $7 cents per hour with 240 hours per month, and a pension at the finish, but they pay on that pension themselves while they are working.

There is only one suggestion on this streamliner of the old day coaches and that is a crying baby. If the cryingest baby you have ever encountered.

You reflect that this baby is perhaps crying from sheer joy of going to California and that it will probably grow up to be one of those bookmakers who cry even when they are glad.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1938

+ + Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein.—Mark X., 15. + +

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Dr. Leroy W. Coons, Universalist minister, Boston. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. Dr. Bunyan McLeod, First Presbyterian Church, Hyde Park.

The Editor Says:

THERE is grim warning in the last report retiring Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the Maritime Commission gave Congress on the Merchant Marine.

He told the Senate Commerce Committee:

"To tolerate present conditions and to allow the present chaotic situation to continue without determined and courageous efforts to bring about proper conditions in the field of maritime labor would in our opinion invite the COMPLETE DESTRUCTION of the American Merchant Marine."

To whom is this important?

Certainly to none more than to those whose stake in having merchant fleets at sea under the American flag is their JOBS.

Certainly, then, the continuing spectacle in recent years of American shipping being reduced to impotence and obsolescence is a major LABOR TRAGEDY.

BUT OF COURSE IT IS ALSO A NATIONAL TRAGEDY.

IT MEANS MORE

—than the unemployment of maritime labor. It means the DISAPPEARANCE OF AMERICAN SHIPS from the seas, less shipbuilding and closed markets for a tremendous volume of materials.

And of course it means A PERILOUS BREACH in our NATIONAL DEFENSE.

The "complete destruction of the American Merchant Marine" toward which we are heading MUST BE STOPPED.

The Government MUST STOP IT.

If private owners of merchant fleets cannot finance and build modern carriers, available to the Navy in time of war, the Government must do it.

If maritime labor, influenced by radical subversionists to whom disruption of industry is a GOAL, will not fulfill its responsibility to the industry, then government-trained and disciplined crews must do it.

NO LONGER

—can the Government put up with and tolerate endless strife and CERTAIN DISINTEGRATION OF THE MERCHANT MARINE.

The nation has been endlessly patient with both owners and labor in private shipping, has lavished public funds upon their industry, and has seen it getting sicker and sicker, less and less useful as an instrument of commerce, less and less dependable as a unit of defense.

Certainly both owners and labor ought to be able to maintain a peaceful and productive shipping industry under private ownership.

And certainly the proposal by the Maritime Commission for COMPULSORY ARBITRATION of labor difficulties, with assurance of impartial and just decisions for all concerned, would immeasurably enhance this prospect.

But if only government ownership will restore the Merchant Marine, restore its jobs, restore its usefulness in peace and war, THEN WE MUST HAVE GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

REPUBLICANS GET BLAME

"Thank Heaven for Senator Joseph R. Cotton of Lexington and Representative Christian A. Herter of Boston."—Democratic Party "prayer," suggested by a reader of THE EDITOR SAYS.

Thousands of Massachusetts Democrats, office-holding Democrats especially, will add an enthusiastic and grateful "amen" to that proposed "prayer."

Certainly the present Democratic Administration has no better or more able servants than Messrs. Cotton and Herter. Their work on the Commission on Taxation has been wonderful—that is, from the Democratic politicians' viewpoint.

Both of these gentlemen are advocates of a Sales Tax to soak even the child who buys a stick of candy, of a revised Income Tax to gouge stenographers and clerks, and of a plan to cut the wages of State troopers.

If their ideas become law, the Democrats will have approximately twelve million MORE dollars to spend for "soft" jobs for their friends and for similar vote-getting activities.

And, BECAUSE BOTH MESSRS. COTTON AND HERTER ARE REPUBLICANS, the Republican Party will be the "goat," will have to assume ALL THE BLAME.

Perhaps, "Jim" Farley, Democratic Party boss supreme, will reward these two Republicans. Perhaps, he will name a couple of his new postoffices after them.

MRS. ROGERS IS RIGHT

"New England industries have as much right to fight for their rights, as has the State Department."—Representative Edith Nourse Rogers of Lowell.

Congresswoman Rogers properly rebukes Secretary Hull, whose newest complaint is that New England is spreading propaganda against his free trade treaties.

Everybody in this part of the country knows that the concessions Mr. Hull has made to Japanese, Czechoslovakian and other foreign industries have destroyed thousands of American jobs.

But nobody ever suspected that the situation had reached such a deplorable state that the Government in Washington expected us to accept a PERMANENT depression and say nothing.

"Protect Us From the Storm!"

By Nelson Harding

The House of Representatives will be called upon within a few days to pass the Roosevelt Administration's Navy Bill.

The Committee on Naval Affairs has held extensive hearings on the measure.

At those hearings, the voice of Pacifism has been heard—a voice "advising" America to seek national security by means of disarmament and weakness.

At the same hearings, the voice of Internationalism has been heard—a voice exhorting America to seek peace in the pitfalls of "Collective Security."

The country is weary of listening to these voices.

It knows that Pacifism turns into Defeatism—and defeat—when foreign dangers threaten.

Great Britain's present dilemma proves that PART OF THE WAY. The present woes of China prove it ALL THE WAY.

The country knows, too, that "Collective Security" is the old mirage of foreign entanglements under a new and deceptive name.

It witnessed one outcome of this in the abject failures of the League of Nations. It witnesses another in Spain's devastating "little war" between alien "ideologies."

More ominous still, the country witnesses the warlike moods and plans of Europe, where rival "isms" and imperialist ambitions contend and where jealous Powers construct vaster armaments than the world has ever seen before.

The American people KNOW that the "little wars" in Europe and Asia portend GREATER WARS.

They know that the glooming occurrences in Europe are the precursor of dreadful events.

They see, upon the world's whole horizon, the approaching terrors of A NEW WORLD WAR—and they remember what a terrible price we paid for unpreparedness when the LAST World War engulfed us.

They realize that there is only one sure way of keeping America out of foreign wars, and keeping foreign wars out of America—an ADEQUATE national defense.

And so, the Congress of the United States hears today ANOTHER VOICE—the commanding voice of America, saying:

"PASS THE NAVY BILL!"

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

FROM Penn's Woods, which some people call Philadelphia, comes another one of those news items to the effect that dentists will never hurt us any more.

That doesn't mean that an all-wise Providence will do away with dentists. It is simply another rumor that the perfect anaesthetic against tooth-pain has been found.

The ills to which the teeth are heir seem to be numbered among man's earliest known afflictions. The jaw of one of our very remote ancestors—a doughty warrior who roamed the forests of Rhodesia 125,000 years ago—shows that its owner knew the exquisite pain that comes from an abcessed tooth.

And in the tombs of Egypt, Greece and Rome, in distant Hindustan on the other side of the world, in Mexico and Peru, archaeologists are still finding examples from the very remote past of gilded teeth, teeth adorned with golden bands, with inlays of gold, diamond, crystal and jade.

Never was the race too young to appreciate the beauty of lovely parted lips and gleaming, pearly teeth. Princesses of the House of Pharaoh, Incan princesses on the slopes of the Andes, patrician matrons of Imperial Rome, ladies of the Middle Ages—all submitted to the erudest of dentistry to win back charms ravaged by bad teeth.

For many years dentistry was essentially handicraft—the work of the mechanic or craftsman—more closely associated with the art of the jeweler than the dentist. Paul Revere, an excellent silversmith but mainly noted as a horseman, advertised that he was prepared to fit false teeth of his own manufacture, or adjust those installed by Dr. John Baker, surgeon-dentist of Boston.

George Washington, we know, possessed a set of ivory teeth made by one John Greenwood, and these were a source of great tribulation to the General, and to most of his staff as well, at Valley Forge.

Dentistry in America is less than a century old. Between 1840 and 1868 twelve dental schools were founded, and the highest tribute to the practitioners of the newly-acknowledge art came when aristocratic Harvard announced the establishment of its dental school.

It was then that Oliver Wendell Holmes remarked:

"I have real interest in the welfare of a profession to which so many of us ought to feel grateful with every word we speak and every morsel we swallow."

In the course of a few decades, dentists have been transformed from an unorganized and casual craft, scattered over the country, doing their work as a by-product of mechanics, into a strong, firmly-knit profession sixty thousand strong, with fifty-one colleges, professional associations and a literature of their own.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

(One of a series of articles prepared by O. O. McIntyre before his sudden death.)

THOUGHTS while strolling: For the Wonder Girl Club—Marion Gillespie, who has never seen "Tobacco Road." Still another cowboy humorist from Oklahoma: Cal Tinney. Suggestion for a mystery play title: "In a Room Off Times Square." Popular radio executive: John Royal.

Add colorful gowns: Those of Mrs. Roy Howard and Hattie Bell Johnston. They say J. P. Morgan always stops to see a window display of pipes. Frank Craven looks the same as he did 25 years ago. The Stork Club is out front with the debutantes.

No one ever knew the box office value of vaudeville folk so precisely as Eddie Dowling. Benny Goodman is just a new time Ted Lewis letting himself go. The New Deal's Forgotten Boy—Raymond Moley. Can't imagine William Rhinelander Stewart busting out into a hearty ho-ho!

The forlorn-looking Eddie Duchin. Not many could pique the interest of the night club crowds more than Fannie Ward, rounding in at 3 a. m. all merry and bright. And where is she now? The Waldorf's Mr. Boomer and his fancy trellis of sideburns. Without that eye sparkle, Sonja Henie would be just another skater.

Not many men who wouldn't give a lot to look like Clark Gable in a turtle neck sweater or Noel Coward in a white silk muffler. The handsome former polo star, Larry Waterbury. A liveried footman in a limousine. Yoo hoo, those happy days are here again!

Young Jack Osterman is receiving the Broadway plaudits for his behaviourisms in plodding over the come-back trail. In partial eclipse, he is a strict patron of the milk depots and has had several night club engagements which he filled capably and is now receiving nibbles from the Hollywood studios as a gag man.

Phillips Lord, who started his radio career with his impersonations of the back-woodsy Seth Parker, has finally become city broke. For a long time he clung to his native Maine traditions, but today steps out in tails now and then to white-tie it around night haunts. There are even rumors he has been sighted in spats.

The exceedingly beautiful Rosamond Pinchot's suicide was really a study in stage-struck frustration. Her enthusiasm for the theater was a consuming passion, and although she attained a degree of success, she wanted her name blazing over a marquee. I once sat next her at dinner and her entire talk was of the play and players. What did I think of Katharine Cornell, Helen Hayes and Meredith Burgess?

Born to wealth and social position, she preferred the performers of stage and screen and the gatherings of these were about the only parties she attended. Such enthusiasms are difficult to understand but there are many.

The Political Parade

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.

STATE and local governments are running a neck-and-neck race of waste and extravagance with the Federal spendthrifts in Washington.

The grand totals of cost of government, Federal on the one hand and State and local on the other, are now almost evenly balanced.

The "ten billion-dollar Congress" is matched by the latest available complete figures of the Census Bureau of the grand total cost of local governments throughout the Union.

A survey of these figures leads one to wonder how much longer the American taxpayers can stand a drain upon their resources which is overwhelming them with debt, crushing economic initiative, and placing American industry at a disadvantage with foreign competitors who enjoy cheap labor costs, and an increasing access to American markets through the Hull reciprocity treaties.

The total cost of State, county, city, village, township, and school-district government in the United States in 1931 and 1932, was $9,554,569,790.

Of this $2,505,834,267 were State costs, $1,406,819,769 were county costs, and $3,762,533,688 were city, village and township costs. In addition there was a school cost of $1,569,324,634 not included in other city costs.

In some States more recent figures are available. In Colorado State costs increased from $21,445,900 in 1930, to $32,332,765 in 1935.

Florida increased from $25,725,035 in 1931, to $36,861,208 in 1935.

Illinois increased from $107,805,000 in 1931, to $164,124,881 in 1936. In Indiana and Iowa the cost of government doubled between 1931 and 1935.

The more these figures are studied in Washington the more it is realized that vigorous economy must be applied to every form of government in the United States if the people are to be saved from unnecessary waste and overlapping governmental functions, and eventual bankruptcy.
